The harem concubine

10 BREE, Philippe Jacques van. Odalisque. Bruxelles, Degobert, (ca. 1850).

Lithographed plate depicting a half-reclining nude with a string instrument and a parrot, with a black woman smoking a hookah next to her. Ca. 17,5 x 22 cm. € 95,00

Philippe-Jacques van Bree, a Belgian painter (1786 - 1871), was influenced by Orientalism. He often chose exotic subjects, often with nudes. An odalisque, Ottoman Turkish, was a chambermaid or a female attendant in a Turkish seraglio, particularly the court ladies in the household of the Ottoman sultan. In western European usage, the term came to mean the harem concubine, and refers to the eroticized artistic genre in which a woman is represented mostly or completely nude in a reclining position, often in the setting of a harem. It was part of a fascination with Orientalism. - Fine.

The history of the Inquisition, as it is exercised at Goa

22 DELLON, Gabriel. Historie der inquisitie tot Goa. En in andere gewesten van Indien. Uyt het Frans vertaalt. Amsterdam, Pieter Mortier, 1697.

Sm.8vo. Contemporary vellum. With engraved title-vignette, 3 engraved vignettes and 6 engraved plates (3 folding).

(12),282,(17) pp.

€ 850,00

First Dutch edition; first published in French in Leiden in 1687: Relation de l'inquisition de Goa. - In 1668 Dellon sailed to India with the Compagnie des Indes. He travelled extensively along the Malabar coast. In 1673 he left the employment of the company and started a private medical practice in Damao, at that time a Portuguese colony. Six months later, early in 1674, he was arrested by the Inquisition and taken to Goa, where he was imprisoned for two years. He was then shipped to Lisbon, but released in the following year on condition that he should return immediately to France. .. It proved a considerable success, particularly in Protestant Europe, where it ran to numerous editions. Although long regarded purely as a work of propaganda, recent research has testified to its accuracy (Howgego p.304/305). '

Dellon's description of the Inquisition and of the practices of its officials and their collaborators is the only source available on the functioning of that institution by a contemporary who saw it from the inside' (Lach, Asia in the making of Europe III,2, p.851). It includes also details of his stay in Bahia, Brazil. His account of the Inquisition was still forbidden in Portugal in 1769. It is one of the few contemporary sources available. - A nice copy.

Sm 8vo. Original printed boards (rebacked), uncut. With engraved title depicting Haafner's arrival on the island Caradival and folding plate depicting his meeting with the Jammedaar at Alamparvé after Jacob Haafner by Reinier Vinkeles. VIII, 268 pp. € 225,00

Second edition; first published in Amsterdam in 1806. - Travel from Madras to Ceylon in 1806. Jacob Gottfried Haafner (1754 - 1809) was a German-Dutch travel writer who lived in and wrote extensively on India and Sri Lanka.

His travelogues were noted for their Romantic undertones, lively descriptions of Indian cultures and peoples, as well as criticisms of European colonialism, slavery, and cultural domination. He mixed up facts, romance and strong prejudices in very readable stories which provide insight into typical English

Enlightenment views on colonial and Indian society' (Coolhaas p.66-67). Haafner witnessed the Company's death agony and demise, and wrote about it. He has a lively and compelling manner (Nieuwenhuys, Mirror of the Indies, p.21). - (Margin of 1 leaf damaged with some loss of letters). *Tiele 433; Cat. Sm.8vo. Old marbled wrappers. With engraved title-vignette and double-page engraving. 23, (4) pp. € 175,00

Issued in Pieter van der Aa's collection of voyages. - When Pedro Alvares Cabral called at Cochin in the winter of 1500 to 1501, he was approached by two Syro-Malabar priests, Joseph and Mathias, who requested to be taken on board for the voyage to Europe so that they could visit Rome and Jerusalem. Mathias, however, died en route. In the cities of Europe, Joseph was apparently interrogated at great length about his homeland, and was regarded as a man of the highest integrity. His description of Cranganore, although bigoted and biased in favour of the Christian community, was widely accepted at face value. In Rome he presented a report on the Malabar Christians and answered numerous questions, some of them directed from the pope himself (Howgego p.557). An early account of a visitor from India to Europe. - Fine.

First edition. - The official eye-witness report by lieutenant Kempees, aide-de-camp of Van Daalen during the famous, careful prepared, expedition to Aceh, Sumatra. The expedition was successful and Kempees' book is known for its accurate information. The expedition was carried out with such ruthlessness that public and parliamentary opinion turned against military policy in Aceh. (Cf. P. van 't Veer, De Atjeh-oorlog p. 267-269). Photographs were taken by Henricus Marinus Neeb (1870-1933), a Dutch military doctor during the later stages of the long lasting Aceh War. He photographed sights in the area beginning in 1904 including architecture, indigenous peoples, colonial buildings such as rail infrastructure and buildings, topography, scenes of Dutch soldiers, and Acehnese killed in the conflict.

The discovery of the Victoria Falls

52 LIVINGSTONE, David. Missionary travels and researches in South Africa including a sketch of sixteen years' residence in the interior of Africa. London, Ward, Lock & Co., (1899).

Original decorated cloth gilt. With portrait and photographic plates.XV,617 pp. € 75,00

First published in 1857. - In 1852 Livingstone asked his family to join him in Africa. With the help of the Makololos, a South African tribe, Livingstone planned to explore the whole of southern Africa as far as Angola. The missionary had become an important explorer. As the first European, he traveled on the Zambezi to Kazembe in a pirogue, a fast water vessel made from a tree trunk. In order to escape from the slave traders of Portuguese Africa, Livingstone traveled via Cassange and Bihé to Luanda, a Portuguese port and the capital of Angola, where he arrived completely exhausted on 31 May, 1854. As soon as he had recovered from his fever, he undertook a trek to Lake Dilolo, discovered the source of the Kasai, a left tributary of the Congo, and arrived in Linyanti, the capital of the Makololos. In the course of the major Zambezi expedition that followed he discovered the Victoria Falls, the falls of the middle Zambezi, in 1855 (Waldmann, Eyclopedia of world explorers, p.226). Mendelssohn I, p.908-10; SAB III, p.136; Hess & Coger 3068.

A popular narrative of the loss of the Kent East Indiaman in the Bay of Biscay

53 (McGREGOR, Duncan). A narrative of the loss of the Kent East Indiaman, by fire, in the Bay of Biscay, on the 1st March 1825. In a letter to a friend. By a passenger. 2nd edition, with additions. Edinburgh, Waugh and Innes, 1825.

Sm.8vo. Contemporary blind-tooled calf, gilt (some staining). 96 pp. € 295,00

A popular narrative, first published in 1825, with at least four other editions. - The Kent, Capt. Henry Cobb, sailed for Bengal and China on 19 February 1825. The ship encountered a storm in the Bay of Biscay, and on March 1 an officer checking the spirit room dropped a light just as a cask stove. The spirits at once caught fire and the flames were soon out of control. Fortunately the brig 'Cambria', Captain Cook, was soon sighted, and three of the six boats on the 'Kent' were used to transport her people to the brig... Apparently 568 out of the 637 people were saved from the 'Kent', a very good record in view of the stormy weather and the difficulty of reaching small boats from a large ship, one soldier's wife gave birth only an hour or two after reaching the Cambria. They reached Falmouth on March 4, 1825 (Huntress 227C).

4to. Contemporary speckled vellum, spine ribbed. With engraved title page, folding engraved plate showing different incarnations and 5 engraved illustrations (3 fullpage). (16),371,(4) pp. € 975,00

First French edition. - First published in Dutch De open-deure, tot het verborgen heydendom, Leyden 1651. 'This is the earliest European account of Hinduism in Southern India. Rogerius left in 1630 and worked in Palicatta (Coromandel) for ten years. He then went to Batavia where he served the Portuguese Church for five years. He repatriated in 1647 and settled in Gouda where he died in 1649' (Landwehr, VOC). This is the first work in Europe to publish the translation of a piece of Sanscrit literature (the Sayings of Bhartrhari, on pp. 291-339). The curious plates depict processions, ceremonies and self-chastisement. This copy belonged to François Pétis de la Croix (1653-1713) with his owner's entry and purchase date August 28, 1697, and his notes and comments in the margins. Pétis de la Croix, son of the king's interpreter for oriental languages was educated to succeed his father. He was an eminent orientalist, spoke arab, turkish and the languages of Persia, Tartar and Ethiopia. He was an attaché to the navy, the Foreign Office and interpreter to the King (Howgego p.812). Roger prepared probably the most thorough description of south-Indian Hinduism to be published before the end of the 19th century (Howgego p.903). The first authentic record of Hindu culture as practised by the Tamil Brahmins of South India. - A fine association copy.

4to. Modern boards. With woodcut on title-page. (24) pp.

First edition. - South Celebes (Sulawesi) lay on the route that the Dutch took from Batavia to Amboyna. The sultan of Makassar (now Ujung Pandang), the leading representative of Islam in the region, was especially hostile to the Dutch missionary drive. He was also determined to protect Makassar's position as an international harbour for the spice trade, open to all nations. With the support of the English, Danes and Portuguese, he had long resisted the efforts of the Dutch East India Company (VOC) to monopolize the spice trade. Alarmed by this development, Batavia in 1666 sent an expedition against Makassar led by Cornelis Speelman (1628-1684). He forced the sultan in 1669 to conclude a treaty which the Dutch, obtained a monopoly of Makassar's trade and succeeded in bringing South Celebes under Dutch supremacy with the help of the Bugis people who were being oppressed by the Macassarese. Rare account of the victory of the Dutch East India Company over the kingdom of Macassar in the years 1666 -1669.
