New York; Harper & Brothers; MCMXXIV [1924]. Dictated by Clemens over several years with the stipulation that it not be published until after his death (he originally said until he had been dead "at least a hundred years"!)." As might be expected of anything which Mark Twain wrote, this autobiography is unlike any other ever written—as unconventional and unorthodox as its great author. Always, when the time came for him to go on with the dictation, he chose as his subject whatever was most interesting to him at the moment, regardless of chronological order. For he believed that a man's thoughts, not his outward acts are his true history, which alone reveal him completely. The resulting book is a stream of table-talk: anecdotes, humorous and serious; reminiscences of his mother, his daughter Susy, his boyhood days in Missouri; chronicles of his friendships with all manner of men, from General Grant and President Cleveland to his Irish coachman and the unfamed intimates of his vagabond youth; bold expressions of opinion on every sort of topic—all are here, full of the vigor and the humanity of their author, and forming an inexhaustible mine of entertainment, amusement, and delight. —publisher's blurb.

[Dunedin]; Otago [University Press]; (2014). Explorer Jules-Sebastien-Cesar Dumont d'Urville (1790-1842) is sometimes called France's Captain Cook. Born less than a year after the beginning of the French Revolution, he lived through turbulent times. He was an erudite polymath: a maritime explorer fascinated by botany, entomology, ethnography and the diverse languages of the world. As a young ensign he was decorated for his pivotal part in France's acquisition of the famous Venus de Milo. D'Urville's voyages and writings meshed with an emergent French colonial impulse in the Pacific. In this magnificent biography Edward Duyker reveals that D'Urville had secret orders to search for the site for a potential French penal colony in Australia. He also effectively helped to precipitate pre-emptive British settlement on several parts of the Australian coast. D'Urville visited New Zealand in 1824, 1827 and 1840. This wide-ranging survey examines his scientific contribution, including the plants and animals he collected, and his conceptualisation of the peoples of the Pacific: it was he who first coined the terms Melanesia and Micronesia. D'Urville helped to confirm the fate of the missing French explorer Laperouse, took Charles X into exile after the Revolution of 1830, and crowned his navigational achievements with two pioneering Antarctic descents. Edward Duyker has used primary documents that have long been overlooked by other historians. He dispels many myths and errors about this daring explorer of the age of sail and offers his readers grand adventure and surprising drama and pathos [from the blurb]. #65676

NOTICE TO CUSTOMERS:

This is our one hundred and eighty-third short list. We hope you find something of interest.

We intend to produce many more lists in future on a variety of subjects and we would prefer where possible to send these by email as PDF file attachments or links to files on our Website. This has the obvious advantage of reducing costs and enhancing the speed of delivery and the email/PDF versions will also be enhanced with colour illustrations. A fully illustrated version of this list in pdf format is also available on our website or will be emailed on request. Likewise we encourage you to send orders by email, fax or telephone.

If you would like to receive future lists please indicate your interests by email (preferred) or by using the form below by fax or post. If you would like to receive ALL lists (email only) please let us know also. If for any reason you do not wish to receive any more of these lists, also please let us know and we will cease and desist.

We have experimented with a number of forms for emailing orders to us but many security systems now prevent such links from working correctly so we suggest simply emailing us at: books@GastonRenard.com and copying and pasting the entries of the items you want from the list above. If you encounter any difficulties, please let us know! For orders by fax or by post please use the Order Form at end.
