HENRY STEVENS'S FRANKLIN COLLECTION

2. AMERICANA. Catalogue of the FIRST PORTION of the EXTENSIVE AND VARIED COLLECTIONS OF RARE Books and Manuscripts relating Chiefly to the History and Literature of AMERICANA... and Henry Stevens's Franklin Collection which will be Sold By Auction, by Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge... on Monday, 11th of July, 1881, and Four Following Days at One O'Clock Precisely, frontis, vi + 229 pp. 8vo, binder cloth, Trinity College Cambridge Bookplate with decommission transfer stamp to "A.N.L.M" Alex Noel Latimer Munby, the author and Librarian with his bookplate, London, Stevens's Historical Collections 1881

The Collection was purchased by Congress in 1882 for the State Department and then deposited in the Library of Congress.

The Library acquired the Benjamin Franklin Papers in 1903 through transfer from the Department of State—but not before the collection had made two transatlantic voyages. The bulk of the collection was first brought to London by Benjamin Franklin's grandson William Temple Franklin, who had plans to profit from the publication of his grandfather's papers. Most of the collection consists of journals, records, articles, letters and other materials, which William Temple Franklin thought would be valuable for publication. These papers were discovered tied in bundles in the shop of the London tailor who had been his landlord. By the time they were rescued the tailor had cut up an unknown number of Franklin's letters and writings to make patterns. These papers were purchased in 1851 by American book dealer Henry Stevens. In 1882 the United States Government purchased the Franklin papers from Stevens, but only after Stevens rescued them from the hands of creditors with the help of banker Junius Spencer Morgan (father of banker and book collector J. Pierpont Morgan). En route to the United States the papers once again narrowly escaped destruction when the New York pier they landed on in January 1883 burned just after they were picked up by the shipping agent responsible for delivering them to Washington.

Henry Stevens (1819-1886) was a London bookseller, bibliographer, publisher, and an expert on early editions of the English Bible and early voyages and travels to America. He helped build up the collections of John Carter Brown and James Lenox, as well as the Smithsonian Institution and the Library of Congress. In 1845, Stevens moved to London and became an agent for the British Museum for procuring books from the Americas.

3. BAKER (Sir Samuel) Woodburytype Head and Shoulders Portrait, an oval 4½ x 3½ ins. within a printed decorative border, edges a little spotted, London, Lock & Whitfield, 1877

Sir Samuel Baker (1821-1893) Traveller and Sportsman, Explorer of the Nile, also Superintendent of the construction of the railway connecting the Danube to the Black Sea. The romantic story of Florence and Samuel Baker, from his purchase of her in a Hungarian Slave Market of as a seventeen year old slave, to their two African Expeditions is well known from his writings. This is the first time Florence's account of their second expedition has been published, having only recently been rediscovered. While Queen Victoria was happy to knight Samuel Baker and receive him at Court, she could never her bring herself to accept or receive the remarkable Florence.

OPIUM WARS

6. BOWRING (Sir John, 1792-1872) Despatches from the Governor Sir John Bowring to the Secretary of State, [Hong Kong] Despatches from the Secretary of State to Governor Sir John Bowring, Correspondence between Mr. Anstey and the Secretary of State, Correspondence between the Under Secretary of State and Sir John Bowring, Extract from Rules and Regulations of Her Majesty's Colonial Service, vii + 452 pp. the first few pages stained with oil, folio, disbound, The House of Commons, 21st. March, 1860

On 13 April 1854, Bowring was sent to Hong Kong as governor. During his governorship, a dispute broke out with the Chinese and the irritation caused by his spirited or high-handed policy led to the Second Opium War (1856-1860). At the same time, he allowed the Chinese citizens in Hong Kong to serve as jurors in trials and become lawyers. Finally, Bowring is credited with establishing Hong Kong's first commercial public water supply system and establishing the Hong Kong buildings ordinance, ensuring the safer design of all future construction projects in the colony. He had developed the eastern Wan Chai at a river mouth near Happy Valley and Victoria Harbour. He elongated the river as canal and the area was named Bowring City, (Bowrington).

SKETCH MAP OF AFRICAN LAKES

8. BURTON (CAPT. SIR RICHARD FRANCIS BURTON [1821-1890]) Miscellaneous Notes in ink in his typically minute hand, on Richard Henry Major's Book on The Life of Prince Henry the Navigator (pub.1868), including a detailed map of the region of Africa covering Tanzania, Mozambique, the Congo and Kenya in which

Burton has identified various lakes including Lake Albert, Lake Victoria and Lake Tanganyika, 7 pp. 8vo. on blind embossed stationery of the Atheneum Club, c.1871

Burton notes that Prince Henry 'declared that his object was to "acquire wealth, knowledge of the world and, if possible fame"', he also records references to Santiago (that it was not discovered by Antonio de Nolle but by the Portuguese Ddiego Gomes), Sierra Leone, Cape of Good Hope, Venezuela, China, Ceylon, Germany and others, mentioning Hippopotamuses (described by Cadamosto as Horse Fish), the Pillars of Hercules and explorers Christopher Columbus (who had endured 'twelve years hardship and fatigue'), Martin Behaim the cartographer and others.

It hard to date these notes exactly. Burton was appointed as the British Consul in Damascus in 1868, he was recalled in August 1871. He was reassigned in 1872 to his final post in Trieste. His time in Damascus was very full, including writing, Unexplored Syria with Tyrwhitt Drake, pub.1872.

Burton may well have had a stock of Atheneum Club's note paper and used them at anytime, but perhaps there was a moment in between his 2 appointments to settle in the Library to read Major's book and compose these notes?

Richard Henry Major was a geographer and map librarian who curated the map collection of the British Museum from 1844 until his retirement in 1880. The Life of Prince Henry the Navigator included Major's summary of 'new facts in the discovery of the Atlantic Islands, a refutation of French claims to priority in discovery, Portuguese knowledge (subsequently lost) of the Nile Lakes and the history of the naming of America' drawn from 'authentic contemporary documents'. From 1849 until 1858, he was the Secretary of the Hakluyt Society.

10. CALLIGRAPHY. An Impressive Illuminated Calligraphic Triptych Depicting Christ in Glory and the Last Supper after Leonardo da Vinci, flanked by figures of a Pope and a Saint, with the words from the Latin Mass starting with the Gloria, with a large decorative border of flowers and two cherubs, illuminated initial letters, background toned, colouring and gilding bright, on fine wove paper, lifted from its original backing and replaced with acid free conservation card, 15 x 23½ ins. 38x60 cms. in the original gilded domed frame, France, late 19thC. This arresting piece of professional calligraphy was made to hang in a church perhaps as an “Ex Voto” or even a Memorial to a parishioner. It falls between the rich stone carved Momento of someone who has died, and the amateur Folk Art Ex Voto for a divine intervention for someone living .

13. CHINA. Imperial Railways of North China - Imperial Railways of North China: Peking-Mukden Line, Quickest Cheapest Overland Route Between Europe and China, Train Service General Information 32pp. folding map, 28 text illu. cr. 8vo, original printed wrappers, outer margin of upper cover sunned, metal stitching, Tiensin, Tiensin Press, Limited, Issued by Order of the Directors 1911

The Peking-Mukden Railwayline 北京-奉天铁路 was the first railway in China. It took 31 years to build and was 840 kilometers long. It started with the construction of Tangshan-Xugezhuang Railway in 1881. It could be taken as a microcosm of modern China's railway development. In the process of Chinese modernization, the development of modern transportation encountered huge resistance from the deeply conservative ruling classes. the Peking-Mukden Railway was extended section by section from Peking, the capital of the Qing Empire to the alternative capital Mukden.

It was the jewel in the crown of China's railroad system. The standard gauge Peking-Mukden Railway (also known as the "Ching-Feng" and later the "Pei-Ning" line in Chinese or the "IRNC" or the "Northern Railway" in English,) passed through Tientsin and joined the Southern Manchurian Railway (SMR) at Mukden.

23. HUGHES (Thomas ed.) G.T.T. Gone to Texas Letters From Our Boys, First Edition, cr.8vo, original cloth, spine laid down, London, Macmillan & Co. 1884 Thomas Hughes, Author of Tom Brown's Schooldays, Parliamentarian and Social Reformer, was the proud Uncle of "Our Boys". In the preface to these Letter he extols their spirit of enterprise, emphasising the lack of opportunity and despair young middle class men felt in Britain.

In 1878–9 Hughes began writing The Manual for Co-operators (1881), with Vansittart Neale, for the Co-operative Congress. As a side-product he developed an interest in the model village. In 1880, he acquired the ownership of Franklin W. Smith's Plateau City and founded a settlement in America—Rugby, Tennessee—which was designed as an experiment in utopian living for the younger sons of the English gentry.

The Rugby experiment grew out of the social and economic conditions of Victorian England, where the practice of primogeniture and an economic depression had left many of the "second sons" of the English gentry jobless and idle. Hughes envisioned Rugby as a colony where England's second sons would have a chance to own land and be free of social and moral ills that plagued late-19th-century English cities. The colony would reject late Victorian materialism in favour of the Christian socialist ideals of equality and cooperation espoused in Hughes's Tom Brown's School Days. Rugby was unsuccessful on its own terms, but it still exists today and is listed on the U.S. National Register of Historic Places

INDIAN THEYAM DANCING.

25. INDIA. A Bronze Theyam Dancers Breast Plate representing a Goddess in the cult of Bhagawathi, the Mother Goddesses in the folk religion in North Malaba in Kerala, Southern India, 25 x 15 ins. polished bronze, with stylized cobra shoulder mounts for securing the piece around the dancers neck, a small hole for a jewel in place of the belly button, and symbols for the sun and moon on either side, late 19th Century, Theyyam (Teyyam, Theyyattam or Thira) is a popular ritual form of worship of North Malabar in Kerala, India, predominant in the Kolathunadu area (consisting of present-day Kasargod, Kannur Districts, Mananthavady Taluk of Wayanad and Vadakara and Koyilandy Taluks of Kozhikode of Kerala) and also in Kodagu and Tulu nadu of Karnataka as a living cult with several thousand-year-old traditions, rituals and customs. The performers of Theyyam belong to the lower caste community, and have an important position in Theyyam. They are also known as 'malayanmar'. People of these districts consider Theyyam itself as a God and they seek blessings from this Theyyam. A similar custom is followed in the Tulu Nadu region of neighbouring Karnataka known as Bhuta Kola. The prominent characteristics of primitive, tribal, religious worship had widened the stream of Theyyam cult, where "even the followers of Islam are associated with the cult in its functional aspect" and made it a deep-rooted folk religion of millions. This Breast Plate is used in the cult of Bhagawathi, the Mother

Goddesses, which had and still has an important place in Theyyam. Besides this, the practices like spirit-worship, ancestor-worship, hero-worship, masathi-worship, tree-worship, animal worship, serpent-worship, the worship of the Goddesses of disease and the worship of Graamadevataa (Village-Deity) are included in the main stream of the Theyyam cult. Along with these Gods and Goddesses there exist innumerable folk Gods and Goddesses. Most of these Goddesses are known as Bhagavathy (the Mother-Goddess that is the Divine and United form of the three principal Goddesses namely, Brahmani (Saraswati), Vaishnavi (Lakshmi), and Shivani (Durga)).

expertly strengthened and repaired, stamped on the reverse "THOS.J.RUST INDIA

PHOTOGRAPHER”, numbered on the reverse from 1 to 51 together with a separate manuscript key identifying most of the sitters, Allahabad, Rust c.1880

This photograph came from an Album belonging to the Gower Family. On the reverse it is numbered from 1 to 51 together with a separate manuscript key identifying the names of majority of the sitters including Sir George Ebenezer Wilson Couper, 2nd Baronet KCSI CB CIE (29 April 1824 – 5 March 1908). From 15 February 1877 to 17 April 1882, Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh. He is seated on a step in the middle of the picture holding his hat and cane.

Thomas Rust's professional activity dates from the 1860's when he was in partnership with Timothy Le Beau. They had two studios Le Beau & Rust in Bayswater Athenaeum and Westbourne Grove. The partnership dissolved in October 19, 1865 (London Gazette, 1865) and were listed as bankrupt in Perry's Bankrupt (Gazette October, 1865). Thomas Rust's next venture was running the Calcutta Photographic Company with W. T. Burgess and did so until 1874, when he opened five of his own studios in Allahabad, Mussoorie, Murree, Landour and Meerut. He was patronized by the 6th Earl of Mayo, Governor General and Viceroy Of India from 1869 -1872, and who was assassinated in the Andaman Islands.

taken in Yokohama received from Mrs Read 5th July 1892. Taken about Xmas 1891”, from an Album belonging to the Gower Family, Yokohama, [1891]

George Gower Robinson was a prominent British businessman and broker in Yokohama, and reputedly a libertine and a dandy. He was shot and killed there by Lt James H. Hetherington of the United States Navy, then serving on the steamer 'Marion', on the 14th of February 1892. After repeated warnings from Hetherington, and promises by Robinson to cease his attentions to the lieutenant's wife, Hetherington shot and killed Robinson in the Bund, the European district of Yokohama. He was charged with willful murder at the inquest, but after a very long and detailed trial which proved beyond doubt his guilt, he was acquitted by unanimous verdict of the American Consular Court. The ex-patriot community felt much sympathy for Hetherington for being willfully provoked and praising him as a saviour of families. - W.R. Gardiner The Trial of Lieutenant Hetherington... Yokohama 1892.

FIRST OF THE GREAT ARAB DICTIONARIES

35. LANE (Edward William) An Arab-English Lexicon, derived from the best and the most copious Eastern sources; comprising a very large collection of words and significations omitted in the Kámoos, with supplements to its abridged and defective explanations, ample grammatical and critical comments, and examples in prose and verse In two books: the first containing all the classical words and significations commonly known to the learned among the Arabs: the second, those that are of rare occurrence and not commonly known. and Supplement edited by Stanley Lane-Poole, 8 parts bound in 4 vols. folio, contemporary half morocco, small library blindstamp some wear to joints and scuffing, some headbands weak, London & Edinburgh, Williams and Norgate, 1863-1893

From 1842 onwards, Lane devoted himself to the monumental Arabic-English Lexicon, he was unable to complete the dictionary before his death. It was completed in eight parts. The first five, as far as the letter 'ayn, came out between 1863 and 1874, and the last three after Lane's death in 1876. The sixth volume, which Lane had all but completed, appeared in 1877. The seventh and the eighth, from the letter qaf on, were published in 1885 and 1893, edited and supplemented by Lane's great-nephew, Stanley Lane-Poole, who pieced together Lane's notes and also provided the biography of the author prefixed to part six. These parts together make up the first book stated in the title: that containing all the classical words "known to the learned among the Arabs".

Lane's Lexicon was the first of the great European dictionaries of Arabic to appear in a vernacular and the first in English (his predecessors, such as Golius and Freytag, having preferred Latin). It therefore answered a growing need of scholars and civil servants connected with the expanding British Empire who wished to study classical Arabic. Still in production at the time of Lane's death in 1876 after 34 years' dedication, it is a truly remarkable work of scholarship that has yet to be surpassed in the realms of lexicography and remains an essential tool to scholars well into the 21st century. It drew heavily on the great Arabic monolingual dictionaries, in particular Firuzabadi's al-Qamus al-Muhit.

Stewart was intensely interested in weapons and tactics. His observations in 1799 of 'light infantry' and Tyrolese and Croat soldiers that did not fight in the rigid formations adopted by normal infantry units that led him to propose that the British Army should include a permanent force of 'light infantry', equipped with rifles. His ideas won support, especially from the influential Equerry to the King, Colonel Cootte Manningham, who Stewart had first met in the West Indies
In this pamphlet he advocated general adoption of many of the innovations he had already made within the 95th. Regt.
Glover, the historian of the Peninsular War, wrote, "As a battalion commander, Stewart was surpassed only by Moore; as a general he was a menace."

Sumner forcefully advocated the annexation of Alaska in the Senate, he was against the annexation of the Dominican Republic, then known by the name of its capital, Santo Domingo. Although Sumner forcefully advocated the annexation of Alaska in the Senate, he was against the annexation of the Dominican Republic, then known by the name of its capital, Santo Domingo. After leading Senators to defeat President Ulysses S. Grant's Santo Domingo Treaty in 1870, Sumner broke with Grant, and denounced him in such terms that reconciliation was impossible. In 1871, President Grant and his Secretary of State Hamilton Fish retaliated; through Grant's supporters in the Senate, Sumner was deposed as head of the Foreign Relations Committee. Sumner had become convinced that Grant was a corrupt despot and that the success of Reconstruction policies called for new national leadership. Sumner bitterly opposed Grant's reelection by supporting the Liberal Republican candidate Horace Greeley in 1872 and lost his power inside the Republican Party. Less than two years later, he died in office.

THE EAST INDIA COMPANY CHAIRMAN ROBERT GREGORY'S COPY

64. SYMES (Michael) An Account of an Embassy to the Kingdom of Ava, Sent by the Governor-General of India. In the Year 1795, First Edition, 2 engraved folding maps by J. Walker after Dalrymple and Thomas Woods, some marginal tears repaired, 26 engraved plates including 4 folding, 3 double-page, bound without the half title, 4to. rebacked, original calf boards refurbished, Signed on the title by Robert Gregory of Coole Ireland, with his son Richard's Bookplate, and the note "The bequest of his father Robert Gregory 1810", London, W. Bulmer and Co. 1800
In 1795 Symes, a Dublin born Diplomat, was sent by Sir John Shore, the Governor-General of India, on a mission to Burma. He obtained from King Bodawpaya, then known to the British as King or Emperor of Ava, a royal order permitting a British agent to reside at Rangoon to protect the interests of British subjects. The map produced by the expedition of the Irrawaddy is the first accurate chart to be published.

Robert Gregory, 1727-1810, was an Irish-born East India merchant, Chairman of the East India Company and politician who sat in the British House of Commons from 1768 to 1784. In 1768, he acquired the Coole Park estate of 8,000 acres near Gort in County Galway in Ireland and built a house there. He was succeeded by his second son Richard and continued the planting of trees. He also developed the library. He died in 1847 from a fever while nursing tenants during the famine. He was the father of William Henry Gregory who married Isabella Augusta, friend and patron of W.B. Yeats and of a wide circle of Irish Literary and Nationalist bodies.

Hobart-Hampden retired from the British Navy in 1862. In 1867 he joined the Ottoman Service where he commanded the fleet with the title of "Bahriye Livasi" (rear-admiral). He was successful in helping the suppression of the Crete insurrection, and was awarded the title of Pasha in 1869 by the Sultan. He was again in service during the Russo-Turkish War. In command of the Ottoman squadron he completely dominated the Black Sea, blockading the ports of South Russia and the mouths of the Danube, and paralysing the action of the Russian fleet. On the conclusion of peace Hobart still remained in the Ottoman service, and in 1881 was appointed Mushir, or marshal, being the first Christian to hold that high office.

HMS Victory is a 104-gun first-rate ship of the line of the Royal Navy, laid down in 1759 and launched in 1765. She was first reconditioned in 1800, and converted from 100 to 104 guns. She was famously Nelson's Flagship at the Battle of Trafalgar sending to the Fleet his famous message "England expects that every man shall do his duty". By 1831 she was laid up. She housed the Naval School of Telegraphy from 1889. By 1921 she was in serious need of restoration and was moved to No.2 Dry Dock in Portsmouth, and under the supervision of the Society for Nautical Research, money was raised for the work. In 1928 George V unveiled a plaque commemorating this great restoration, although the work continues. This Souvenir is from that period. She was bombed unsuccessfully during the Second World War. She continues to be flagship of the Second Sea Lord and is the oldest naval ship still in commission.

89. WILDE (Oscar) Impressions of America, edited, with an introduction, by Stuart Mason, FIRST EDITION, 40 pp. spotting at beginning and end, cr.8vo, printed wrapper, chipped, strengthened with Japanese Tissue, preserved in a hard cover envelope folder, title in leather on spine, Limited to 500 copies, Keystone Press, Sunderland, 1906

In 1883 after Wilde returned from his year long lecture tour in America he penned notes for a talk entitled Impressions of America (aka Personal Impressions of America) which he gave in various cities across Britain and Ireland in the following few years. In March 1906 Stuart Mason, Wilde's future bibliographer, published a booklet of the text (above, Mason 653) in a limited edition of 500 copies. In addition to the essay, the published edition contains two of Wilde's early poems, Le Jardin and La Mer, together with a Preface by Mason, and an afterword about Wilde in an interview, taken from the Lady's Pictorial.

CORONATION SERVICE AND TICKET

90. WILLIAM IV. The Form and Order of the Service that is to be performed and the Ceremonies that are to be observed, in The Coronation of Their Majesties King William IV and Queen Adelaide, in the Abbey Church of S. Peter, Westminster, On thursday, the 8th of September 1831, iv + 71 pp.[bound with] a Coronation Ticket for The Right Honourable Henry William Wynne [with] A Sermon Preached at the Coronation of Their Most excellent Majesties King William IV, and Queen Adelaide in the Abbey Church of Westminster September VIII MDCCCXXXI by Charles James Lord Bishop of London, 15 pp. [bound with] The Ceremonies to be observed at the Royal Coronation, ii + 18 pp folded, title a little soiled,sm.4to hf. calf, rebacked, original label on upper cover, and the crested paper bookplate or seal of Henry Watkin Williams, the Parliamentary Historian and Diplomat, inside the front cover, London, Eyre and Strahan, B. Fellows, 1831

William inherited the throne at the age of 69, at a time when the monarchy was at a uniquely low, ebb and insisted that his coronation should cost only a fraction of his brother's, which proved a popular move. The few Tickets, Service Papers and Ceremonial instructions were issued together, the Coronation Sermon separately. It is unusual to find them each individually let alone gathered together as above.

Hitler's NSDAP (National Socialist German Workers' Party, commonly known as the Nazi Party) attained power in March 1933, after the Reichstag adopted the Enabling Act of 1933 in that month, giving expanded authority. The Act – when used ruthlessly and with authority – virtually assured that Hitler could thereafter constitutionally exercise dictatorial power without legal objection.

96. WWII. DE GAULLE (Charles) TO ALL FRENCHMEN.. France has lost a Battle! But France has not lost the war! coloured hand bill double sided, in French and English incorporating the French Tricolour, 25.5 x 7 cms. [London] 1940
On June 18th 1940 De Gaulle broadcast to the French Nation via the B.B.C. with Churchill's permission. The Cabinet had doubts that this might encourage the Pétain Government to become closer to the German Invaders. The hand bill campaign coincided with this broadcast.

The remaining text of the hand bill -

“A makeshift Government may have capitulated, giving way to panic, forgetting honour, delivering their Country into slavery. Yet nothing is lost!

Nothing is lost, because this war is a world war. In the free universe immense forces have not yet been brought into play. Some day these forces will crush the enemy. On that day France must be present at the Victory. she will regain her liberty and her greatness.

That is my goal, my only goal! That is why I ask all Frenchmen, wherever they may be, to unite with me in action, in sacrifice and in hope. Our Country in in danger of death. Let us fight to save it. LONG LIVE FRANCE! C. de Gaulle
