ORIGIN OF THE SPECIES FOR CREATIONISTS

- 1. ADAMS (Sebastian C.) ADAMS Illustrated Panorama of Universal History, A chronological chart of Ancient, Modern and Biblical History Synchronized by Sebastian C. Adams, 21 glazed coloured lithograph plates mounted on linen, folded to 28 x 13½ ins. opening out to 22ft approx. some marginal repairs, original half leather, with title in gilt on upper cover, some wear, London & Paris A.H. Walker, 9 Ludgate Circus, - 5, Rue Scribe, 1881

This gigantic panoramic diagram charts the history of the world from a Biblical or Creationist perspective, starting with the creation of Adam in 4004 B.C. and ending in 1881. The last recorded item is the erection of an Egyptian Obelisk from Heliopolis, in Central Park New York donated by William H. Vandebilt in February 1881. At the end of the chart Adams shows the currently reigning world rulers, discusses the development of the United States, and even offers a breakdown of historically important technological developments. Adams also interestingly attempts to reconcile Biblical with Global history, associating for example, Noah, with Yao, a legendary figure in early Chinese mythology. [Stock ID: 14215] £950

WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION

- 2. AMERICA. A Fine "Stevenograph" Woven Silk Book Mark, "The Star Spangled Banner", with the American Flag above the verse and music, 14 x 2¾ ins in gold red white & blue with pink tassel, together with printed display board, 21 x 3½ ins. 3. AMERICAN JUVENILE. A Collection of 43 Hand Coloured Catch Penny Broad Sheets each with 16 woodcut illustrations, numbered

7,8,18,19,21 - 50,52-60.12 x 16 ins. 28 x 40.5 cms. some marginal staining affecting a few, Printed expressly for the Humorous Publishing Co. Kansas Mo. Imagierie d'Epinal imp.ed. c.1880The University of Florida records all 60 of these Broad Sheets, and the Library of Congress only 59.[Stock ID: 14192] £650

4. ANGLO-MERICAN HANDBILL. The American Stranger, 5 verses of 8 lines, with a woodcut of a ship in full sail,10 x 4 ins. folding crease, slight wear, Strood, Sweets, Printers, c.1815

An American Sailor in a British Port would have been remarkable at the time this was printed, and a Handbill mentioning America would have been an extraordinary curiosity. The final line "And God Save the King" reassures us that this is not the song of an enemy. The lines "If ever I prove false To my heart's delight, In the Midst of the ocean, There shall grow a myrtle tree" hinting of an unbreakable bond - Isiah 55 verse 13 "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree: and it shall be to the LORD for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off."

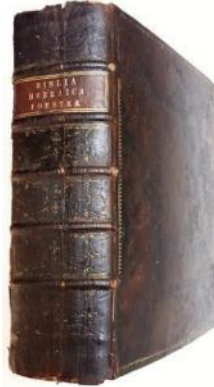

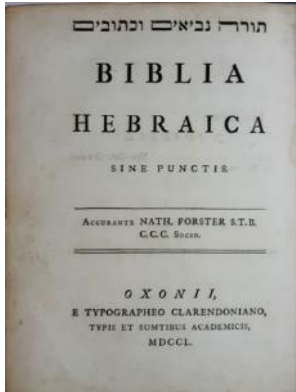

Not recorded in Copac

TUTOR TO THE KHEDIVE'S SONS

27. BUTLER (Alfred Joshua, 1850-1936) A Manuscript Diary documenting his time Egypt, in between his tutoring duties Butler has much time to visit the Churches and Roman remains of Old Cairo, he records conversations with the Khedive, his handling of a Mutiny in the Army there, the festivals and parties, and with Arab delegations, including a voyage to Greece and Turkey, from January 15th 1881 until 10th May 1881,

217 pages, written on alternate pages of a note book, with occasional note on the verso, 14½ x 9½ ins. 37 x 24 cms. original boards, canvas spine, inscribed on the front endpaper "Alfred J. Butler, Abdin Palace Cairo", and underneath in Arabic, also with a signature of S.A. Roslin, the South African Politician and Islamicist, 1881

Butler, apart from tutoring, had spent much of the previous year researching his work on Coptic Churches, and he continues here with his explorations along with friends Rev. W.J. Loftie and W.C. Middleton. "I went with Middleton to Old Cairo to make a collection of pottery fragments for William Morris. The glaze is so beautiful and the colours so rich... and Morris will be glad if he can imitate them. He spends much time conversing with the Khedive on Mutiny among the Soldiers, the remains preoccupied by the Mutiny and predicts the breakup of Turkey and Greece.” His brief journey to Greece and Constantinople, then on to Venice via Brindisi. Alfred Joshua Butler was an Historian, and Fellow of Brazenose College, Oxford. In 1880 he was employed as tutor, in the Abdeen Palace to the sons of the Khedive of Egypt, the eldest of whom became Khedive in succession to his father in 1892. This put him in an unrivalled position to pursue his Coptic studies. Ancient Coptic Churches of Egypt was published in 1884, and his book on Court Life In Egypt was published in 1887.

52. CRIMEA. CLARKE (George Calvet) Long Autograph Letter Signed, to "Shute" Charles Cameron Shute of the 6th Inniskilling Dragoons in the Crimea, describing in great detail the problems of quartering Cavalry Divisions for the coming winter,12 pp. 8vo, Constantinople, 5th October, 1853

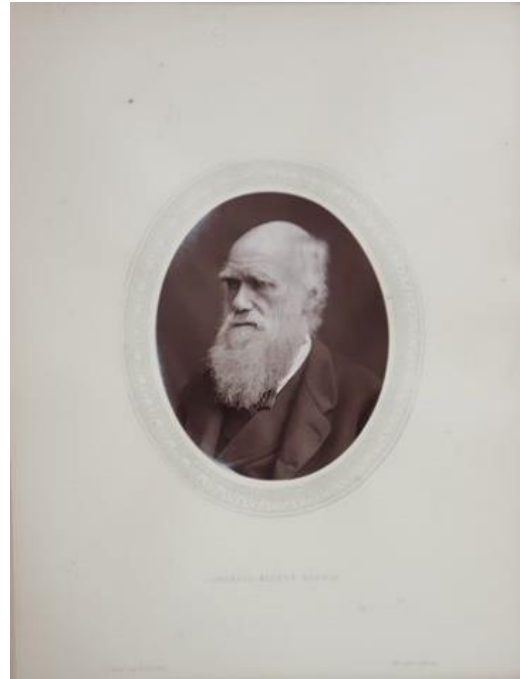

"Wednesday the 26th of September in company with Capt. Gordon of the Engineers in a Government Steamer for Ismid." After arriving they found that the chalk marks left by General Storks on buildings suitable for quarters had been rubbed out, and that, "thanks to a peppery English Consul and an equally peppery Commissariat Officer who between them had bullied the Pacha of the place and his Council to a frightful extent, instead of receiving assistance from the local authorities were more likely to find all kinds of opposition from them. Fortunately Gordon, who is an exceedingly good fellow in every respect beside being an excellent man of business, was all in favour of conciliatory measures, and I perfectly agreed with him in this view, and in a very short time we had smoothed the injured pride of the Turks and put them in high good humour.” He continues with worries about fire risks in the wooden buildings and the time taken for preparing them.

54. FARQUHAR (William) Natural History Drawings The Complete William Farquhar Collection Malay Peninsula 1803 - 1818, with Essays by John Bastin and Kwa Chong Guan and captions by Hassan Ibrahim and Morten Strange, numerous coloured illu. sm.4to, original papered boards, dw, Singapore Edition Didier Millet and the National Museum of Singapore, 2010

This book brings together all 477 pieces in

Colonel William Farquhar’s collection of natural history drawings, commissioned during his time as British Resident and Commandant of Malacca from 1803 to 1818. Covering a wide spectrum of flora and fauna, the evocative paintings were rendered in brilliant watercolour by Chinese artists who employed both Chinese and Western painting techniques. In an era when photography was non-existent, the only means of recording nature and wildlife was through painting. Accompanied by authoritative essays and detailed captions, Natural History Drawings: The Complete William Farquhar Collection is a valuable addition to the art or nature lover’s library, and indispensable to those with an interest in the region. It showcases some fascinating wildlife still present in the region today and is also an important record of species that have been lost or are diminished in number.

FIRST ISRAELI WOMAN PRIME MINISTER

56. GOLDA MEIR. Kokoschka(Oscar, 1886-1980) Lithograph Portrait en bistre, head and shoulders, signed in pencil by the artist, 25½ x 17¾ ins, 42 x 31.5 cm. (16.5 x 12.4 in.) Japon paper, pristine in original publishers wrappings, Edition

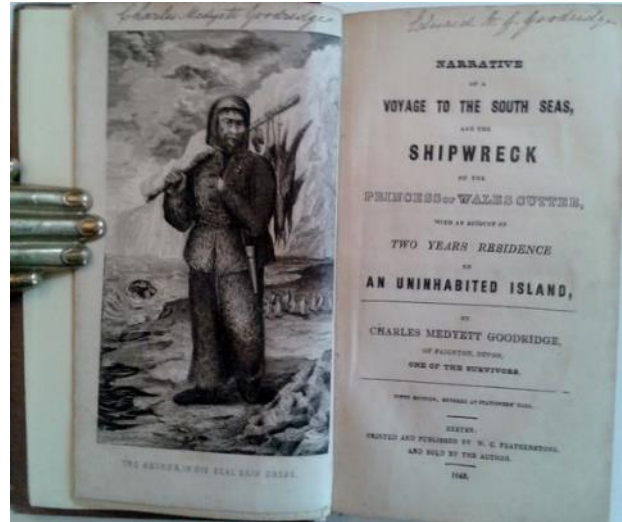

Limited to 150 numbered copies, Jerusalem Foundation, Marlborough Graphics [with] Weidenfeld and Nicholson, London, 1973

Golda Meir (1889-1974) was elected the First Woman Prime Minister of Israel in 1969. She served until 1974. Born in Russia, she was brought up in Milwaukee. On her marriage in 1917 she moved to Palestine. She was one of the two women to sign the Israeli Declaration of Independence on May 14 1948. Carrying the first Israeli-issued passport, Meir was appointed Israel's minister plenipotentiary to the Soviet Union, on 2 September 1948 and ending in March 1949. In 1956, she became Foreign Minister under Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion.

This affectionate portrait of Meir, his contemporary, is in coloured crayon, a technique he developed in Scotland when he moved to Britain. His art was condemned by the Nazi's as degenerate, and he fled his native Austria in 1934. This portrait echoes his early career in Vienna where he painted celebrities in a nervous and animated style.

EIGHTH KAFFIR WAR

58. HALL (Sir John K.C.B. 1795-1866 British Military Surgeon) An Archive of 22 Autograph Letters to His wife "My dearest Lucy" from South Africa 1847-51, at the time of the Cape Frontier Wars, 109 pp. 8vo. & 4to. 1847-1851
 He gives a mass of detail from the arrival of his wife and setting up home in Cape Town with the aid of the redoubtable Lady Smith, to the daily skirmishing, from Grahams Town and King Williams Town, with Sir Harry Smith, he complains of the Press reaction, and the grind of surviving the gorilla warfare. Sir John Hall joined the Army Medical Service in 1815, being posted to Flanders for the final stages of the Waterloo Campaign. Her served in Jamaica 1818-1827 and again 1841-44, Ireland 1835-36 and 1844, Spain and Gibraltar 1836-39, South Africa 1847-51 and Bombay 1851-1854. From there to the Crimean War as Inspector General of Hospital brought him in to conflict with Florence |Nightingale.

Hall married at the age of 53 to a widow of 30. In these letters he illustrates the problems of leading an active if frustrating life in the field, whilst attending to domestic problems back in Cape Town, and the organization of meagre finances with an eye to moving on to Bombay.

The French embas. spake to me this night, for a yacht to carry the Siam envoyés for Calais, that are sent to France, lett them have it when they aske for it. J."

Winchester,

1 side 8¾ x 13¾ ins. 22 x 35.5 cms. inscribed on the reverse in a secretarial hand "His Royal Highness to Mr. Pepys", outer margin of integral blank and a few small holes expertly restored, Sep. 19 1684

This letter was written at the time of the Embassy from King Phra Narai of Siam to France. In 1680, France had obtained the monopoly of the spice trade in Siam with the encouragement of Paulkon Constantine, the Greek Adventurer, the King's First Minister. In 1684, the first of many diplomatic missions composed of two Siamese Ambassadors and Father Bénigne Vachet, left Siam for France on January 5th. James Duke of York's request to Pepys in this letter for a yacht to take the Ambassadors to France, suggests that they were in England at that time, but there appears to be no record of this visit.

Winchester Sep: 19: 1684.

I had last night, when I came from Portsmouth, yours of the 17., and as to what you propose, concerning the other Lieu., for the Phenix, it will be time enough, when I come to London, to resolve out, I intending to be there, on wensday next, the french Embas: spoke to me this night, for a yacht, to carry the Siam envoyes, for Calais, that are sent to France, lett them have it, when they aske for it. &c.

To Samuel Pepys

Bénigne Vachet was appointed as an interpreter, to accompany the Siamese diplomatic mission, composed of two Siamese ambassadors in 1684 . They were received at the Palace of Versailles , in the Hall of Mirrors , by King Louis XIV. During this visit to Versailles , Father Benigne Vachet reported that the king of Siam Phra Nai (Narai) could be converted to Catholicism . Later in 1685 Louis XIV decided to send an embassy to Siam, led by the Chevalier de Chaumont with the presence of Bénigne Vachet, the Abbé de Choisy , the Jesuit Guy Tachard , and Siamese ambassadors. In 1686 , he returned to Versailles during the diplomatic visit of the Siamese ambassadors led by Prince Kosa Pan.

This was also the Rebellion against Company, and the this letter, “Phenix”, was sent Charles II’s Duke of York as charge of the Navy help with the Pirates at Bombay. pardoned Richard followers who had Bombay by force December.

Samuel Pepys was appointed King’s Secretary of Affairs to the Admiralty in June 1684, a post he kept until the end of James II’s reign. He had spent time in the Tower of London having been accused of being a Catholic and passing Naval Secrets to the French, during his previous time as Secretary to the Admiralty Commission 1673-1679.

Coy. Regiment as usual”, Mesopotamia, 12.3.17

“We were in a lot of work from 18th Dec. till the 3rd. Feb. & the last date was very hot with us & the enemy, we went over the top taking three lines of the Turkish trenches & held them well but sorry to say our casualties was very heavy, t’was only a matter of luck in going through alright with the Shrapnel & “live stock” we went through & in their trenches they knew the range so well with the guns & made it like “Fair Hell” all the time anyway I am not at all anxious to see such a time like it again. We was very near to Kut-el-Amara then ?.... Glad to say we have been relieved & come back to[deleted] about 150 miles from Kut. We march some of the journey & did the rest on boats on the River Tigris.... Xmas 1916 was anything but a pleasant one with us. We could have done with a little warning back there were getting very cold & wet wether, & was in the opened or trenches all the time. Couldn’t even get the tent to go in. I did well the first couple of week in January with the parcels intended for Xmas coming out, & glad to say they were none the worst for the journey out, Could hardly realised we were so near to the Turks with the luxuries & Xmas Cakes & pudding which was such a treat out here.... I should very much like to have the thoughts of helping with the haying this year think I shall soon get used to the work when I get the luck of starting on again.” He finishes “PS Sorry I cant put name of Regt. but latest are we must not do so, but its the same & alright for you to do so. 1840-1850

Carl Ludwig Christian Rümker (28 May 1788 – 21 December 1862) was a German astronomer. In 1821 Rümker went to New South Wales as astronomer at the observatory built at Parramatta by Sir Thomas Brisbane. James Dunlop was second assistant. Rümker was awarded the silver medal of the Royal Astronomical Society together with £100, for his re-discovery of Comet Encke on 2 June 1822 and also received the gold medal of the Institut de France. Rümker returned to Europe in 1830 and took charge of the new Hamburg Observatory after the death of Johann Georg Repsold in 1830. His chief work was concerned with the cataloguing of stars: a preliminary catalogue of the stars of the Southern Hemisphere was published in 1832 at Hamburg, and from 1846 to 1852 he published his great catalogue of 12,000 stars. His emigration to Ireland seems not to have materialised. The lunar massif Mons Rümker is named after him.

A Collection of Seven Autograph Letters from Thomas Maclear to fellow astronomer, Dr. John Lee, the first four letters were written in 1833 at the start of his journey to South Africa on board a ship off the coast of Great Britain, the last 5 letters, dated from 1834 to 1846, were all written from the Royal Observatory in the Cape of Good Hope, 26 pp. 4to. 1834-1846

The letters at the start of the voyage are brief and wistful "I have just had my last peep at the Greenwich Royal Observatory, God knows when I may again see it. I now feel more than ever the importance of the High Office I have undertaken". The last 3, 15 pp. are more detailed and about his work. 18th Jan 1844, discussing many matters including his health, an invitation to Robben Island, expeditions relating to a survey he is involved in and staff matters and appointments " The most talented men in the survey are the greatest drunkards, consequently cannot be trusted in the neighbourhood of brandy or wine farmers. The others who can be trusted where such temptations are found usually are idle or stupid." 23rd October 1844, relating mainly to astronomical observations, instruments and telescopes etc. "Of course the method of observing must depend on the Instrumental resources of the Astronomer. Meridian instruments alone will not afford a sufficient number of measures to get rid of errors of observation when the definition may prove indifferent". "Mr Drachs suggestion shall be attended to at the next opposition of Mars". Also much about the Frontier (Caffre) Wars. 11th September 1846 "My spirits are almost borne down by the task I am about to undertake in the Bushman flat, for which place I start next week, now that Mr Smolley is here to take charge of the Magnetic Observatory and Mr Childe has been drilled in to the routine in the Astronom. department." Maclear expounds at length on the morality and politics of the "Caffre War" and is very critical of the "Caffres" in many respects including their refusal to accept Christianity. He lists some customs of the "Caffre character", for example "The chief has the right to demand the prostitution of every girl he chooses and if any of them attempt to escape, their feet are held over a fire until the soles are sufficiently burned or scorched to prevent the use of them!". Of Robben Island "The Leper Institution has been removed by Govt. ...to Robben Island... I understand that the Lunatics from Somerset Hospital were also removed to Robben Island where the public buildings are well adapted for their existence."

Sir Thomas Maclear (17 March 1794 - 14 July 1879) was an Irish-born South African astronomer. He was a medical doctor by profession. Maclear arrived in South Africa on 5 January 1834 to assume his duties as Royal Astronomer at the Cape. He established an observatory and scheduled astronomical, meteorological and magnetic observations. Between 1834 and 1838 he worked closely with John Herschel, who was carrying out surveys of the southern sky. From 1841 to 1848 he surveyed an area stretching from Namaqualand to Cape Agulhas to redetermine calculations of the size and shape of the earth. This created a sound foundation for a trigonometric survey and accurate mapping of the Cape Colony. David Livingstone was a close friend and both had a keen interest in the exploration of Africa. With Maclear's astronomical observation and assistance, Livingstone was able to plan his expeditions. The crater Maclear on the Moon is named after him as is Maclear's Beacon on Table Mountain, the South African town, Maclear, Eastern Cape and Cape Maclear in Malawi, named by David Livingstone.

SLAVERY

97. SLAVERY. Handcarved Meerschaum Pipe Bowl in the shape of a Negro Head, without the amber pipe, 3 x 3 ins. with a silver collar dated Birmingham, 1892

Meerschaum is the mineral Sepiolite a hydrous magnesium silicate. The mineral itself is the fossilized shells of tiny sea creatures some 50 million years ago, covered and compressed over the ages by layer upon layer of silt. Through seismic movements they became dislodged and can be found floating in areas of Turkey around the Black Sea. The first recorded use of meerschaum for making pipes was around 1723.

98. SLAVERY. ABINGDON (Willoughby Bertie, Lord) Speech of the Earl of Abingdon, on His

Lordship's Motion for Postponing the Further Consideration of the Question for the Abolition of the Slave Trade: with some Stricture on the Speech of the Bishop of St. Davids,

Debrett, London

23 pp. title a little dust soiled, small hole in last page affecting one letter, stitched as issued, [1793]

This speech, delivered on the 11th April, 1793, uncharacteristically rails against the New Thinking, the Rights of Man and French Philosophers. Abingdon's sympathies were known to be with the French Revolution from his pamphlet "A Letter to Lady Loughborough" – 1798.

99. SLAVERY. AFRICAN AND INDIAN COMPANY. The Speech of his Grace James Duke of Queensberry, his Majesties high

Commissioner to the Parliament,

Andrew Anderson, Edinburgh,

1 side folio, top margin waterstained, 1700

This brief Speech by the second Duke of Queensbury, Lord High Treasurer, Keeper of the Privy Seal, and Lord High Commissioner to the Parliament in Scotland, states "I have Power and Instructions, for everything that appear'd Necessary or Convenient for the Good and Advantage of the Nation, as to their Religion, Property, Liberty, Trade, and particularly what could be most solid Use to our African and Indian Company."

The Royal African Company was a mercantile company set up by the Stuart's and London merchants to trade along the west coast of Africa. It was led by James, Duke of York, Charles II's brother. Its original purpose was to exploit the gold fields up the Gambia River identified by Prince Rupert during the Interregnum, and it was set up once Charles II gained the English throne in the English Restoration of 1660. However, it was soon engaged in the slave trade as well as with other commodities

LEGACY OF A BRITISH SLAVE OWNER

100. SLAVERY. BARBADOS. Contemporary Manuscript Copy of the Will of Henry Frere of the Parish of Christ Church, Barbados, 2 pp. large folio, 16 x 13 ins. 30th May, 1792

In Barbados pounds Frere bequeaths to his brother £50, to his niece £ 3000 with an extra £1000 if her husband predeceases her. To her daughter £2000, but to her other daughter, his other grandniece the remains of his estate including “for ever together with the future issue and increase of all and every one of my female slaves” meanwhile the executors have power “from time to time as they judge proper to purchase Negroes or other Slaves or Lands or Houses or Cattle and stock of every kind.”

“Henry Frere was Barbados slave-owner, whose estate were indebted to the Lascelles. Reported by Hughes-Queree to be grandson of Thomas Applewhaite Frere from whom he reportedly inherited the Kingsland estate in 1749. The will of Tobias Frere II suggests the estate belonged first to Tobias Frere II and then to his brother Henry. No man named 'Thomas Applewhaite Frere' has yet been traced: it seems likely that this refers in fact to Thomas Applewhaite, the maternal grandfather of Tobias Frere II, Henry Frere and Applewhaite Frere.

Will of Henry Frere of Christ Church Barbados proved 10/11/1792. Under the will his heir after monetary legacies was his grand-niece Dorothy Jones, daughter of his niece Elizabeth Susanna Jones and Robert Burnet Jones.” -UCL Legacies of British Slave Ownership.

SLAVE TRADE BAN

101. SLAVERY. GOREE. A Clerk Written Letter to "Major Chisolm" acknowledging receipts of money, “I have sincere pleasure in acquainting you that the French Government have issued an order prohibiting the Slave Trade to their subjects at all places on the Coast of Africa to the windward of Cape Formosa so that I trust the fears we entertained of the complete overthrow of all the good that has been done in Africa will prove premature...” signed L. Macauley,

1 side 4to. folded, marginal tears, London, Nov. 1814

Goree, a small island of the coast of Dakar, was under British protection from 1800 when it was taken from the French, until 1817 when they took the island back. Chisholm appears to have been the last Governor.

104. STOWE (Harriet Beecher) Uncle Tom's Cabin,

First English Edition in book form, frontis. portrait, 27 woodcut plates by George Cruickshank, some occasional foxing, 8vo, original cloth, recased spine laid down, spine sunned, John Cassell, Ludgate Hill, London, 1852

This novel was the best selling book of the nineteenth century, with only the Bible outselling it. Not even Dickens, with the death of little Nell, could outshine Stowe's death of little Eva. After its' initial success, the American Civil War and the abolition of Slavery. the novel's reputation soared.

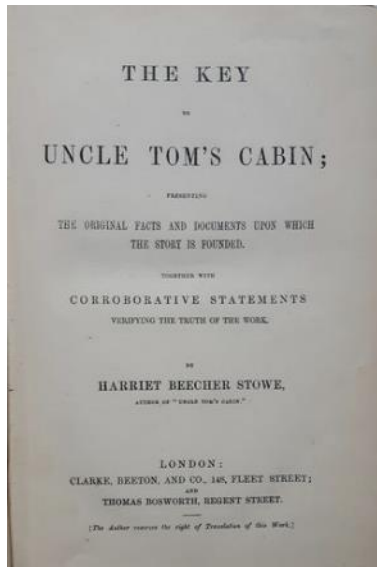

Cassell visited America in 1853 to attend the "World Temperance Convention" in New York, and again in 1854 and 1859 on publishing business. He met the author Harriet Beecher Stowe and arranged for the publication of an illustrated edition of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in Britain - to great success. Cassell strongly supported the cause of the slavery abolitionists. However strong the text is emotionally, and against the Slavery in the Southern State, the illustrations conform to the comic stereotype of Currier and Ives black humour. President Lincoln, it is claimed, blamed the Civil War on this work.
