JEFF WEBER RARE BOOKS
CARLSBAD, CALIFORNIA

EDWIN V. GLASER, (d.2017), "was universally cherished for his humor, wisdom, ethics and generosity, and he was part of the book trade and its culture until his dying days.

"Ed started out in business in the mid-1960s, quoting books found in thrift shops to want lists in AB-Bookman's Weekly. By 1969 he had quit his full time job and opened up a large used bookstore in New Rochelle, NY. In 1970 he joined the ABAA. After some time as a shop owner — as he relates in his video interview with Mike Ginsberg — he got bored with that aspect of the business, and fortuitously, a world class collection of science, medicine and psychiatry was offered to him. After buying the collection and spending some time researching it, he realized he had a "bonanza," and set about issuing a catalog, which was "well received because of the quality of the material." He closed his shop and began to specialize in the history of science and medicine.

"In 1979, with changing circumstances in his personal life, he moved to Sausalito, CA, and was immediately accepted with warm graciousness and friendship into the community of west coast antiquarians. He continued to live in Northern California the rest of his life, eventually moving to Napa. He was one of the founders of the Colorado Antiquarian Book Seminar, the first such annual seminar devoted to arranging colloquia, seminars, classes, lectures, etc., that enabled booksellers and librarians to learn from each other and establish greater rapport. CABS continues (and thrives) to this day, and for many years, Ed mentored booksellers via CABS who are now some of the shining lights in the ABAA. He himself was president of the ABAA from 1986 to 1988.

"One of the joys of the book business is you have the opportunity to invent yourself. There are so many ways to do it. The right way to do it is the right way for you, what you're comfortable with. There are dealers who go out, knocking on the doors of librarians, and others who hole themselves up in their offices, never see the light of day, there are people who do catalogs, people who have open shops, people who do bookfairs... and it's all a question of your temperament... Sure there are some who have made a lot of money in the book business, but for the vast majority of us, the business has enabled us to have a comfortable living, lead a very nice life, doing something we love with a commodity we respect." - from his ABAA video interview.

ED GLASER SELECTIONS

Part I: A-Z

- ¶1003 ALSAKER, Rasmus Larssen (1883-1960). Curing Catarrh Coughs and Colds. New York: The Lowrey-Marden Corporation, 1921. ¶ Small 8vo. 117, [11] pp. Ads. Blue gilt-stamped cloth; covers freckled. Some pencil marginalia pages 26, 52, 38, 80.

[œ] Alsaker published many of his "miracle health books" under a pseudonym, Frank E. Morrison before opting to use his name. Although he was a medical doctor, he excoriated the medical establishment so harshly that a 1921 JAMA article (volume 77, No. 24 pp. 1909-1910) proclaimed: "the average reader might well reach the conclusion that all other physicians, except Alsaker, are either fools or rogues, and that from Alsaker alone flows the only pure, unadulterated 100 per cent medical knowledge." Alsaker argues that organic diet and exercise, alone, are sufficient for good health, and that medicines "are a delusion and a snare" (p.74). An excellent example of turn-of-the-century anti-medicine medicine.

- ¶1004 ALT, Adolf (1851 -1920). Original Contributions Concerning the Glandular Structures Appertaining to the Human Eye and its Appendages. St. Louis: American Journal of Ophthalmology, 1900. ¶ 8vo. [2], 23, [1] pp. 36 plates [containing 71 illus.]. Maroon blind- and gilt-stamped cloth. Very good.

[œ] Alt was professor of ophthalmology, Beaumont Hospital Medical College, St. Louis.

¶1007 ANSTIE, Francis Edmund (1833-1874). Neuralgia and the Diseases That Resemble It. New York: Birmingham & Co., 1882. ¶ 8vo. 233 pp. Green blind- and gilt-stamped cloth. Near fine.

[œ] Anstie was the first editor of The Practitioner, as well as the creator of "Anstie's limit", which: ". . . refers to the daily amount of alcohol that the average drinking individual can consume without risk of deterioration of health. A hundred years after his death the 25th edition of Dorland's Illustrated Medical Dictionary lists the dictum as a rule used in connection with life insurance examination: the maximum amount of absolute alcohol taken daily without injury is 1.5 ounces, equivalent to about 3 ounces of hard liquor, a pint of light wine, or 24 ounces of bottled beer or ale." – Arthur D. Baldwin, "Anstie's alcohol limit: Francis Edmund Anstie 1833-1874." American Journal of Public Health, July 1977; vol. 67 (7): pp.679-81.

"Dr. Anstie's limit is to-day used as the dividing line between moderation and excess by many of the largest life insurance companies in the United States. We find such statements as these in the instructions to medical examiners: "The daily ..." – Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, Volume 150, Issue 1, p.175.

"Anstie's Limit was adopted by influential medical writers, shaping ideas of moderation in Anglophone medicine and was also used in unexpected places, like the British and North American life insurance industries. Even without the limit, ..." – Scott C. Martin, The SAGE Encyclopedia of Alcohol: Social, Cultural, and Historical . . . 2014.

¶1008 ARNOLD, Hans. Die Heilkräfte des Hypnotismus, der Statuolence und des Magnetismus: nutzbringend verwertet in der Hand des Laien. Leipzig: Max Spohr, 1892. ¶ Small 8vo. vi, [2], 95, [1], pp.

Original red- and black-printed wrappers; some small burn marks upper left corner (does not affect reading). Good. [œ] On hypnotism and statuvolism (self-hypnosis) and how to do it.

¶1009 ARTELT, Walter (1906-1976). Einführung in Die Medizinhistorik; Ihr Wesen, ihre Arbeitsweise und ihre Hilfsmittel. Stuttgart: Ferdinand Enke, 1949. ¶ 8vo. VIII, 240 pp. Index. Early brown gilt-stamped cloth. Fine.

[œ] Arelt was professor of the history of medicine at the University of Frankfurt. This work is usually found in wrappers – this is a fine cloth-bound copy. The work is arranged in four parts: I. Der Begriff der Quelle; II. Die Heuristik und ihre Hilfsmittel; III. Kritik und Interpretation; IV. Darstellung der Ergebnisse. These form a very broad framework from which to study the history of medicine, mostly as a guide to historical resources in the published works of others. Garrison and Morton 6444.

- ¶1010 ATKINSON, William B. (editor). A Biographical Dictionary of Contemporary American Physicians and Surgeons. Philadelphia: D. G. Brinton, 1880. ¶ 8vo. 747, [5], 18, [2], [16] pp. Index, ads. Early burgundy blind-stamped cloth; crudely rebacked with white sheep, with original spine title trimmed and mounted. Good.

[œ] Second edition, enlarged and revised, thus the 20-page addendum of names and addresses. Rubber-stamp of Emile Bunje Ph.D.

- ¶1011 AUSTIN, Robert B. Early American Medical Imprints 1668 – 1820. Arlington: Printer's Devil, 1977. ¶ 8vo. x, 240 pp. Chronological index. Printed wrappers. Very good. Reprint of the 1961 edition. $ 5

- ¶1012 AXENFELD, Theodor (1867-1930) (ed.). Lehrbuch und Atlas der Augenheilkunde. Jena: Gustav Fischer, 1909. ¶ 8vo. XV, [1], 679, [1] pp. 10 folding color plates, 455 figures (some color), index. Grey blind - and-black -stamped cloth. Very good.

[œ] First edition. Axenfeld held the chair of ophthalmology at Freiburg Breisgau from 1901 until his death in 1930. He published, as primary or co-author, more than 200 papers in ophthalmology.

CONTENTS: The present volume contains eighteen contributions by ten German authorities, including: Axenfeld, L. Bach, Prof. Alfred Bielschowsky (1871-1940), Anton Elschnig (1863-1939), Richard Greef (1862-), Leopold Heine (1870-1940), Eugen von Hippel (1867-1939), Emil Paul Ernst Olaf Friedrich Krueckmann (1865-1944), A. Peters and Otto Schirmer (1864-1918). These are: Axenfeld, Untersuchung des Auges; Anton Elschnig, Ophthalmoskopische Differentialdiagnose; Heine, Funktionsprüfung; Bielschowsky, Die Motilitätsstörungen und Stellungsanomalien; von Hippel, Entwicklungsgeschichte und angeborene Anomalien; von Hippel, Erkrankungen der Lider; Schirmer, Erkrankungen der Tränenorgane; Axenfeld, Erkrankungen der Konjunktiva; Elschmig, Erkrankungen der Hornhaut; Krueckmann, Erkrankungen der Uvea (Iris Ziliarkörper, Chorioidea), des Glaskörpers und der Sklera; Bach, Krankheiten der Linse; Peters, Lymphzirkulation und Glaukom; Greef, Die Krankheiten der Retina; Greef, Krankheiten des Sehnerven (Nervus opticus) und der Sehbahn; Schirmer, Verletzungen. Sympathische Ophthalmie. Unfallentscheidung; Peters, Die Erkrankungen der Orbita; Heine, Allgemeinerkrankungen und Augensymptome.

- ¶1013 BAILLIE, Granville Hugh (1873-1951). Clocks and Watches; An Historical Bibliography Volume I. Ontario: Movements In Time, 1978. ¶ 8vo. xiii, [3], 414 pp. 120 figures, index. White gilt-and brown-stamped tweed cloth. Fine.

[∞] Reprint of the 1951 edition; printed by The Scholar Press. Very authoritative work which is still the primary source for horological history.

- ¶1016 [Banting, Sir F. (1891-1941)] STEVENSON, Lloyd. Sir Frederick Banting. Toronto: Ryerson Press, 1946. ¶ 8vo. xv, [3], 446 pp. Frontispiece portrait, 22 illustrations, index. Blue gilt-stamped cloth. Fine.

[∞] Tenth and Eleventh annuals. Reviews the contributions from the fields of physics, chemistry, minerology, plant-chemistry [biochemistry], and geology.

From 1822 until 1841, annual reports were issued to Sweden's parliament regarding articles and studies that advanced knowledge in chemistry, minerology, geology, and other sciences. Berzelius is often credited as one of several founders of modern chemistry. He created a form of chemical notation that remains largely in force today, as well as discovering and naming the elements silicon, selenium, thorium, and cerium. He is credited with coining such terms as catalyst, polymer, and isomer.

"Periodically published bibliographies of chemistry that are of importance to historians include Jacob Berzelius' Jahres-Bericht uber die Fortschritte der physischen Wissenschaften in 20 volumes (Tubingen, 1822-41)..." – Andrew Hunter, Thornton and Tully's Scientific Books, Libraries and Collectors.

[∞] PREFERRED QUARTO-SIZE [TALLER] FIRST EDITION. This is the first edition quarto issue. There was a two-volume octavo issue with the type reset, also published in 1831 by the same publisher. Davy is credited with discovering chlorine and iodine, and for isolating for the first-time potassium, sodium, calcium, strontium, barium, magnesium and boron. As befit a well-rounded man of his day, Ayrton describes him: "His mind was as vigorous as it was original, and no less logical and precise as it was daring and comprehensive; nothing was too mighty for its grasp, nothing too minute for its observation; like the trunk of the elephant, it could tear up the oak of the forest, or gently pluck the acorn from its branch" (p.14). While the prose, at times, can border on the hagiographic, the reports of Davy's discoveries and his personal and professional relationships with the great men of his age, make for fascinating reading.

¶1044 DAVY, Humphry (1778–1829). The Decomposition of the Fixed Alkalies and Alkaline Earths, Alembic Club Reprints No. 6. Edinburgh: Alembic Club, 1902. ¶ Small 8vo. 51 pp. Title-page with heavy offsetting. [Heirs of Hippocrates 2334]. Although not directly discussed in this work [he does discuss "general paralysis of the insane (paresis)" pp. 195-215+], Freeman is notorious as a leading proponent of lobotomies in America. He performed nearly 3500, and travelled throughout the U.S. in his lobotomobile – a camper van that allowed him to visit asylums in 23 contiguous states. He perfected ice pick lobotomies in the United States, and no doubt used the knowledge required to write this book as a guide for the proper placing of the point in subjects. [🔍] A facsimile of the 1788 personal defense offered by John Fitch (230 years before Twitter). Fitch, a key developer of the steam engine in America, argues against the claims of his one-time partner regarding who invented the steamboat. Fitch was an inventor, mapmaker, silversmith, and even a scout for the army (he was captured by Native Americans in a skirmish and later escaped). His first steam boat used oars rather than a paddlewheel. He was irascible and argumentative. His defense speaks for itself.

[œ] First edition. Albert Einstein described Gibbs as "the greatest mind in American history." His theoretical breakthroughs in statistical mechanics, vector analysis, chemical thermodynamics, and physical optics remain his legacy. This extremely taciturn man left few letters, speeches, or personal statements of any type. Rukeyser's biography is one of the few insights into the man and his work. Her chapter on the Amistad incident, which concerned Gibbs' father, is nevertheless fascinating reading. Rukeyser received extremely harsh criticism for her biography of Gibbs. It was reported that one critic, Joseph Krutch, was incensed by the book writing, "I am still not certain that [Gibbs] deserves a popular biography or that, if he does, Miss Rukeyser was the person to write it." (The Nation, January 1943, p. 357). Time has sided with Rukeyser.

[∞] Dr. Honigmann was an internist and well-respected medical historian and philosopher who promulgated the concept of Kunsthfertigkeit, that medicine was an art (ars medendi) that dealt with the treatment of sick persons. This practice of healing, and the interactions between physician and patient, was far more relevant than scientific breakthroughs in biology, biochemistry, chemistry, and other fields. This view that medicine is an art (first) and a science (second) was supported by other medical thinkers such as Ernst Schweningen and Richard Koch [The Growth of Medical Knowledge, p. 4].

[œ] Third edition (originally published in 1893). A homoeopathic classic work on the bringing in of iridology to western medicine. Liljequist, known as the second 'father' to iridology, was a Swedish pastor and healer, credited as one of the founders of iridology, where the patterns, swirls, and characteristics of the iris are used to diagnose a patient's general health. "In the 1860's, a young Swedish boy, Nils Liljequist became ill as the consequence of a vaccination, followed by doses of quinine and iodine. He noticed the changes in colour of his formerly blue eyes, as the drug spots appeared." - "The History of Iridology", Guild of Naturopathic Iridologists International London. – web source. [œ] These two volumes cover research requested by NASA's Office of Advanced Research & Technology and the Space Science Board, which in 1966 initiated studies of the physiological problems of manned space flight. The two-part study on respiratory physiology and circulatory physiology, were done by a team of experts who wrote the report published here. Due to the complexity of problems relating to the unknown possible effects of prolonged space flight on the circulatory system, these studies were vital to the success of NASA programs.

PROVENANCE: Ralph H. Kellogg (1920-2009), matriculated to the medical school at the University of Rochester, then after WWII he taught at the Dept. of Physiology at Harvard Medical School, taking his Ph.D. in 1953, then he joined UC Berkeley and then UCSF as Professor of Physiology, where he worked for more than 50 years, specializing in renal and respiratory physiology, with particular attention to physiology of high altitude. "Facilities were primitive, and they were subjects for their own experiments. Their measurements yielded additional information about the control of breathing that helps people adjust to the lack of oxygen pressure in the air. Very few physiologists in the world had laboratory facilities to work at such high altitude, and Ralph came to know most of them." He also collected rare books on mountaineering, clearly relating this interest to the study of high altitude conditions and the human experience.

[∞] Second edition, revised and considerably enlarged. Onimus, a pioneer in the use of electricity in medicine, and a proponent of heliotherapy, devoted his studies to electro-therapeutics. The first edition of this work was issued in 1872 (vii, 802 pages). An English edition was issued, A practical introduction to medical electricity, (1878) and translated by A de Watteville.

The work is divided into two parts: [I] Electrical apparatus, and [II] Physical and chemical effects of electric currents. Among the contents within are treatments for: writer's cramp, cramp associated with telegraph operators, paralysis, hysteria, chorea, epilepsy, tetanus, atrophy, pseudo-paralytic infantile contracture, experiments on the brain of various animals, of bone marrow, treating problems related to nutrition, treatment of clubfoot or flat-footedness, treatments for other leg or foot deformities, female medical needs, skin disorders, heart, the nervous system, etc.

PROVENANCE: Samuel X. Radbill (1901-1987), a devoted pediatrician, Radbill was also a bibliophile: "Radbill was perhaps better known as a medical historian and collector of bookplates and old and rare medical texts than as a pediatrician. He described his fascination with books as beginning while he was in college and credits the old medical texts he began to collect with prompting him to take up the study of the history of medicine. He believed that the study of medicine's past was useful to its practice in the present and encouraged many of his professional colleagues to examine the history of their specialties. Sometimes, he was able to combine these concerns, helping to organize the American Academy of Pediatrics' Pediatric History Club, organizing several exhibits on the history of medicine and of pediatrics at meetings of the American Medical Association and the American Association for the History of Medicine, and participating enthusiastically in all activities of the Section on Medical History of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia." – College of Physicians of Philadelphia.

"Grant L. Rasmussen was born on July 22, 1904 in Cleveland, Utah. His academic path to becoming Chief, Section of functional Neuroanatomy, Laboratory of Neuroanatomical Sciences, in the division of the National Institute of Neurological Diseases and Blindness of the National Institutes of Health (NINBD), began with a strong interest in research and anatomy as a premedical student. Rasmussen was a premedical student at the University of Utah, graduating in 1928 with a major in Zoology. His keen aptitude for research led him to a teaching fellowship at the University of Minnesota Medical School in the Department of Anatomy, where he improved his research skills under Andrew T. Rasmussen (no relation) in the field of neuroanatomy. It was here that Rasmussen developed his long term interest in studying the auditory system and its pathways. Among his most memorable contributions is his discovery and description of a nerve tract, called Rasmussen's Bundle, which is responsible for changing the sensitivity of the inner ear. In 1965, three NIH scientists received European awards for their scientific achievements. Rasmussen was awarded the Docteur Honoris Causa degree by the Universite Libre de Bruxelles (Belgium) for his research achievements on the auditory system. This distinguished award was followed with another, the Beltone Institute Award in 1976 for scientific progress in understanding the central aspects of auditory centrifugal control. He retired from the National Institutes of Health in 1970." – From the guide to the Grant L. Rasmussen Papers, 1933-1985 (bulk 1944-1978), (History of Medicine Division. National Library of Medicine).

"William Frederick Windle, Ph.D., D.Sc. (1898-1985), born and educated in the U.S. Midwest, became an eminent neuroscientist working on both coasts and welcomed internationally. Dr. Windle did his undergraduate studies at Denison University in Ohio. His plans for a medical career were turned aside after two years in medical school by his long and fruitful collaboration with Stephen Walter Ranson of the Institute of Neurology, Northwestern University. That collaboration started in 1921, led to Windle's Ph.D. degree in anatomy from Northwestern and, some twenty years later, to the directorship of that same Institute of Neurology." – UCLA Biomedical Library. His achievement in neurology was with the study of asphyxia at birth and the new understanding of brain damage and related autism and auditory problems.

Photo reference: Rafael Lorente de Nó (1902-1990), a student of two Nobel Prize winners, Santiago Ramon y Cajal and Robert Barany, in Sweden, was a Spanish neuroscientist who advanced our understanding of the nervous system with his seminal research. [∞] This collection of 10 papers are among the very earliest penned by Scheffers. The index to the booklet is signed F. Engel [Friedrich Engel (1861–1941) German mathematician, studied at the University of Leipzig and was a collaborator with Sophus Lie]. "As a student Scheffers was greatly influenced by Sophus Lie, who was professor at the University of Leipzig from 1886 to 1898. He followed Lie's suggestions in choosing topics for . . . his doctoral dissertation. . . Scheffers' favorite field of study was geometry and, more specifically, the differential geometry of intuitive space. In this area he was a master at discovering many properties of particular curves and surfaces and their representation; he also possessed a gift for giving an easily understandable account of them..."

Georg Scheffers, German mathematician, specialized in differential geometry. He was born in the village of Altendorf near Holzminden. Scheffers enrolled at the University of Leipzig where he studied with Felix Klein and Sophus Lie, taking his doctorate degree in 1890. Scheffers was a coauthor with Lie for three of the earliest expressions of Lie theory. – DSB, XII, p. 150.

Before Richard Simmons, Schreber recommended a series of isometric and physical exercise that could be "carried out without a device, everywhere, as a means to health and long life for both sexes of every age." Schreber's oldest son, Daniel Schreber (1842-1911), authored the memoir Denkwürdigkeiten eines Nervenkranken. In the memoir the son reports how his father's insistence on certain physical exercises and practices led to a nervous breakdown and mental illness. Sigmund Freud used the book as the basis for refining and shaping his psychoanalytic technique.

[∞] First edition, self-published and printed by John Anderson Publishing, of this popular work that has often been in print since its beginning, reaching at least 18 separate printings from 1893 up to 1976. The title on the cover is Hypnotism Laws and Phenomena. The Public Press Comments section (279-304 pp.) reflects the self-championing/marketing nature of the book.

Sextus a well-known practitioner in the "occult science of hypnotism or involuntary suggestion", although his brand of hypnotism was more suited to vaudeville than the scholarly field. His description of hypnotism in Chicago at the turn-of-the-century is a primer on how the fad of hypnotism became as much a social as medical phenomenon. The illustrations often are like those found in the Police Gazette. Chapter IX, dealing with the Apaches and Mojowee [Mojave] Native Americans hypnotizing snakes is entertaining. The stereotypes are a guide to the thinking and biases of the times. He also deals with sleep-walking. A necessary item for any collection on hypnotism, magic, and folk medicine.

[œ] First issued in 1846, this edition is augmented with the notes of Plinio Schivardi (1833-1908). "Joseph Skoda described the drum-like sound in auscultation of the chest in patients suffering from pneumonia and pericardial effusion. As one of the leading teachers in the revitalized Viennese Medical School, he also extended and exploited the pragmatic value of physical examination developed by the physicians of the Parisian school. Joseph was born in Pilsen, Bohemia, the son of a locksmith, who lacked funds to provide higher education for his children.¹ However, it is reasonable to assume that the parents must have passed on a rich intellectual heritage and an urge to excel; for in subsequent years, each of the three sons acquired stature, respect, and an enviable position in society. Joseph and his older brother, Franz, studied medicine, the latter advancing to public health officialdom and a royal title. The younger brother, Johann, turned to heavy industry and founded the Skoda steel works in Pilsen. . . he should be judged by his industry clinical contributions, and devotion of his life to the medical clinic. He was one of the first to recognize the significance of the observations on puerperal fever made by his associate, Semmelweis. Skoda, a bachelor, suffered from gout and died of heart disease at the age of 76. A wide knowledge of pathological anatomy and great skill in auscultation and percussion made him the outstanding diagnostician of Vienna of his day, as outstanding contributor to the flowering of Viennese medicine in the mid-19th century." – "Joseph Skoda (1805-1881) - Physical Diagnostician," JAMA. 1964; vol. 190 (3): p.240.

[œ] Celebrates the merger of "the John Crerar Library and science collections of the University of Chicago. Founded in 1894, the Crerar is one of the nation's great research libraries, renowned for its holdings in science, technology, and medicine. This occasion affords an opportunity both to envision ways in which new generations may make use of the collections and to reintroduce the Library to scholars from every discipline. From its earliest days the Crerar has furnished Chicagoans with an exhaustive collection of modern scientific literature. Due to the percipience of its founders, it also contains a remarkable number of historical works of science. These books and manuscripts, numbering more than 25,000 volumes" (University of Chicago, 1984).

"Young, one of the first American experimental physiologists, showed the solvent principle in the gastric juice to be an acid, but wrongly inferred that it was phosphoric acid. He also deduced the association and synchrony between gastric juice and saliva." See: Garrison and Morton 982. "In one year from the time he graduated, he died in Hagerstown, June 8, 1804, in the twenty-second year of his age. A tradition in his family states that the cause of his death, as well as that of his sisters, was tuberculosis." – Howard A. Kelly, American Medical Biographies.

[œ] Amerine was a professor at UC Davis and a pioneer in the fields of wine cultivation and evaluation. Along with his colleague Albert J. Winkler he developed the Winkler scale, which is still used to classify the climate of wine-growing regions throughout the world. Salvatore Lucia was an oenologist and the author of A History of Wine as Therapy. Maynard wrote (on the postcard), "My dear Sal: I am glad you enjoyed the little dinner, but I am sorry you could not come to the Lair of the Golden Bear for a few days... I am sending you a "check list" [this book] for fear you do not have one. Hope you enjoy it if anyone can enjoy a check list! The offset printing idea was NOT mine. With all good wishes, Maynard." [∞] First edition. An epistolary novel, written pseudonymously, about a lady's maid whose mistress frequently engages in erotic whipping. Chapters include: "The Fair Flagellants", "Preparing for a Sensation", "The Whipping of Cupid", "Fanciful Flogging", etc.

"James Glass Bertram (Margaret Anson) was apprenticed to Tait's Edinburgh Magazine and became managing clerk, before joining a company of strolling players. He returned to Edinburgh and set up as a bookseller and newsagent. In 1855 he was appointed the editor of the North Briton and in 1872 of the Glasgow News, leaving to become a freelance journalist two years later.

He published "flagellation" erotica under the names "Revd. William Cooper" and "Margaret Anson". In this graphic unveiling of 19th-century sexual adventures, Margaret Anson, a submissive handmaiden to the notorious Marquise St. Valery, describes the orgies at the Chateau de Floris, where the elite women of Paris submit to the subjugations and exotic indignities of the flesh that trigger ecstatic sensations. "Do you remember how we used to indulge in whipping on the sly, when Madame thought we were in bed? That was a very untutored way of proceeding. I have learned better since, and I can tell you that the passion for the rod is one which grows." – [web-source].

- [œ] First edition and seldom seen with Evans' signature. Evans "made a monumental contribution to the field of endocrinology through his studies of the physiology of reproduction. Many have remarked that the ultimate recognition of his achievements eluded him. Four of his lines of research and discovery were often mentioned as deserving of the Nobel Prize: (1) development of the vascular system, (2) elucidation of the estrous cycle in the rat, and the role of pituitary gonadotropin in reproduction, (3) discovery of growth hormone, and (4) discovery of and isolation of vitamin E. The first of these was entirely Evans' own work. The other three were collaborative efforts, but Evans' contribution to each was crucial." – UCSF, A History of UCSF.

[∞] Introduction by Arnold M. Muirhead. Reprinted from the Bulletin of the History of Medicine, vols. VII, no. 5, May, 1939, pp. 486-534, and no. 6, June, 1939, pp. 595-626. "John Howard was born in Hackney, in east London in 1726, the son of a partner in an upholstery business. On his father's death in 1742, he inherited considerable wealth and settled on an estate in Bedfordshire.

In 1773, he was appointed high sheriff of Bedfordshire and supervision of the county jail became of one his responsibilities. He was shocked by the conditions he found there and visited others in England, where the situation was no better. Jailers were not salaried but lived off fees paid by prisoners for food, bedding and other facilities. This system meant that poorer prisoners lived in terrible conditions. Many jailers demanded payment before prisoners were released, meaning that some stayed in jail even if they were innocent or had served their sentences.

Howard's concerns led to two 1774 parliamentary acts - one abolished jailers' fees, the other enforced improvements in the system leading to better prisoner health. Howard, however, felt that the acts were not strictly obeyed. In 1775, he embarked on a tour of prisons in Europe visiting Scotland, Ireland, France, Holland, Flanders, some German states and Switzerland. He travelled on a similar route two years later, and in 1781 added Denmark, Sweden and Russia to the list. He visited Spain and Portugal in 1782. At a time when travel was uncomfortable and frequently dangerous, he travelled nearly 80,000 kilometres, making seven major journeys between 1775 and 1790, the first two of which are described in his book 'The State of Prisons in England and Wales... and an Account of Some Foreign Prisons'.

While examining Russian military hospitals, Howard contracted typhus in Kherson, Ukraine, and died there on 20 January 1790.

In 1866, the Howard League for Penal Reform was founded in his honour." – BBC.

Dr. Lucia had been a faculty member of the University of California School of Medicine in San Francisco for 53 years.

"Lucia was born in San Francisco, California on March 9, 1901. He matriculated to the University of California, Berkeley, by special examination in 1922, never having attended high school. He received the A.B. degree, with honors, in 1926, and the M.D. from the University of California School of Medicine in San Francisco in 1930, first in his class. He interned at the University of California Hospital and, in 1931 as a National Research Council Fellow in Medicine, was a Research Fellow in Clinical Pediatrics, Instituto Di Clinica Pediatrica, University of Naples, Italy, and Research Fellow at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine. These experiences stimulated his later interest in preventive medicine.

"Lucia became Instructor in Medicine, at the University of California, San Francisco in 1932, and in the ensuing years progressively advanced through the ranks, reaching in 1947 the position of Professor of Medicine, Lecturer in Medical History and Bibliography, and Chairman of the Sub-Division of Preventive Medicine. In 1956, he became Professor of Preventive Medicine and Medicine and Chairman of the newly created Department of Preventive Medicine, a position he held until 1968, when he became Professor Emeritus of Medicine, Epidemiology and International Health. He was a sensitive, warm and supportive father figure to students and to his junior colleagues. His patients literally worshipped him.

"Lucia was a "polymath," with wide ranging interests and curiosity in the fields of medicine, biological, physical and social sciences, medical history, geography, psychology, and music. He was the author of over 200 scientific papers and 8 books on clinical medicine, hematology, immunohematology, and on the medical and social aspects of wine. In 1939, Lucia established the first blood classification laboratory in the Western United States and with his colleagues conducted research on erythroblastosis, hemophilia and other hematologic problems.

"Lucia stressed an ecological view of disease and its prevention. He viewed man as a sensitive organism adrift in a social sea, constantly buffeted by biological, chemical, social and psychological forces which tended to break him down. The role of the physician was to appreciate the interplay of these forces on the individual, and by education and the use of specific procedures, to assist him to regain the equilibrium and to adapt. He noted that man was constantly struggling with "the harassing part of his environment to shape it for his benefit," but he warned that man himself was responsible for much of this harassment by polluting most of his environment with its health consequences. A favorite phrase given to students was "beware of the withering hand of man." Lucia saw that the duty of the physician was in the preservation of health and the promotion of longevity. He was a pioneer and strong proponent of the Health Promotion and Maintenance examination and was an early advocate of the importance of nutrition teaching in medical schools. In the intellectual environment of the 1940s and 1950s, Lucia's ecologic perspectives were often far ahead of many of his colleagues. Today these views are an integral part of the thinking in epidemiology and preventive medicine.

"Lucia received the Sc.D. (Hon.) from the University of Antioquia, Columbia in 1948, the Seal of the State of El Salvador and the Diploma of Honor from the Collegio Medico de El Salvador in 1950, and he was a founder of the University of the Andes in Bogota, Columbia. He was one of the founders of the San Francisco Wine and Food Society in 1935 and the Society of the Medical Friends of Wine in 1939. He was the medical research director of the California Wine Advisory Board, California State Department of Agriculture." – Obit by Nicholas L. Petrakis Piero Mustacchi.
