¶ Kristen Feilberg or Christen Schjellerup Feilberg (1839-1919) was an early Danish photographer who is known mainly for his images captured far beyond the borders of Denmark. From the 1860s until the 1890s, Feilberg participated in expeditions to Sumatra, Singapore, and Penang. In 1867, he exhibited photos at the Paris World Exposition and around 1870 he joined an expedition to the Batak lands of East Sumatra with the Dutch explorer C. de Haan from which he returned with 45 successful "photogrammes". Kristen Feilberg was born on 26 August 1839 in Vester Vedsted near Ribe in the west of Jutland, Denmark. He was the son of Nikolai Laurentius Feilberg, a well-known cleric, and Conradine Antonette Caroline Købke. He was trained as a photographer. After giving up his dream of becoming a painter, he followed his sister to Singapore in 1862 where he worked partly as a tobacco agent and partly as a photographer. In 1864, Feilberg together with August Sachtler took over the photographic studio in Singapore known as Sachtler & Co. Soon afterwards, together with E. Hermann Sachtler, he established a branch office in Penang. In 1867, Feilberg set up his own studio in Penang and, the same year, exhibited 15 views of Penang and Ceylon at the Paris World Exposition. He also produced a 10-part panoramic view of Penang taken from Edinburgh House. The earliest photographs of eastern Sumatra were taken by Feilberg in 1869. Considered to be of excellent quality, they include integrated group portraits of workers on tobacco plantations such as the one at Arendsburg. They are presented in three albums entitled "Views" at the Royal Tropical Institute. In the late 1860s or early 1870s, Feilberg made a photographic tour of Sumatra. In 1867, he was already in Deli and he returned there in 1880. In September of that year, he joined an expedition with C. de Haan who had been appointed by the Dutch East Indies government to explore the area in the interior around Lake Toba where he photographed the landscape and the Batak people, including the hierarchical princes. Photographing Lake Toba was an achievement akin to the discovery of Lake Victoria in 1858. Despite numerous obstacles, Feilberg was able to record the geography of the region, a feat highly appreciated by de Haan who spoke of the beauty of the landscape. In the 1880s, he again worked as a photographer in Singapore. He also worked as a buyer for the Danish East Asiatic Company. Some time after 1880, he spent a few years in Denmark where he also worked as a photographer. In 1890, he returned to Singapore where he worked for several photo studios. He must also have taken part in an expedition to Borneo as evidenced by his photograph (above) of Dayak women from the central area of the island. Scores of Feilberg's photographs from the collection at the Tropenmuseum in Amsterdam can be accessed on Wikimedia Commons as well as at the Tropenmuseum itself. Feilberg died in Singapore in 1919. - On 1 May 1865, Feilberg married Emma Alice Mac-Intine, a Scottish Indonesian with whom he had a daughter, Emma, in George Town, Penang. The mother died shortly after childbirth in March 1866. In 1876, he married Anna Eleonora Sophie Lassen but the marriage was not successful and she returned to Denmark.. They had one child, Hjalmar, who was born in 1877 in Medan-Deli, Sumatra but who died at the age of 2 in Holbæk. (Wikipedia).

¶ Inzet detachement luitenant Oosterman te Tamiang, 9 juni 1893. - Als versterking voor de aanwezige troepenmacht van de Oostkust werd op 7 juni 1893 bekendgemaakt dat 80 man van het Korps Koloniale Reserve (bewapend met 82 van de 100 stuks Steyr-Mannlicher M1895 proefgeweren in Indië), 70 infanteristen van Meester Cornelis, 200 dwangarbeiders, 6 officieren en een dokter met ambulance gemobiliseerd zouden worden. Het waren de kapitein der infanterie N.J.C. van Polanen Petel, de officier van Gezondheid Van Hasselt, de officier van Administratie Van der Linden, de 1e luitenant der infanterie Oosterman en Rutte en de 2e luitenant der infanterie Franssen. Bij wijze van proef was een 100 man sterk detachement bewapend met het nieuwe M95 geweer naar Indië gezonden. Op 9 juni 1893 vertrokken per Reyniersz te Tandjong Priok de troepen en per Swaerdecroon de 200 dwangarbeiders met de officier van Gezondheid Van der Scheer en de luitenant der artillerie Smits. De verse troepen uit Batavia werden vervolgens na aankomst te Belawan aan de Oostkust op dinsdag 13 juni per SS Pelikaan en Soengei Rawa naar Seroeway gezonden om de "3e colonne van kapitein Visser" af te lossen, bestaande uit de luitenants Muller, Heldens, de Roever Krober en Timmer die onder meer te lijden hadden gehad van koorts en beriberi.

De niet tot het detachement der koloniale reserve behorende militairen gingen definitief over bij het detachement Seroeway. De Koloniale Reserve voerde haar eigen administratie. De kapitein Van Polanen Petel vertrok naar Seroeway om daar de dienst van het uitrukken te regelen, alsook de veiligheidsdienst buiten de versterking. Hij diende steeds als commandant de uitrukkende troepen vergezellen. Alle aangelegenheden het militair commando betreffende, werden door de postcommandant, de luitenant Adema van Scheltema, behandeld, het journaal werd door de kapitein Van Polanen Petel opgemaakt. In september 1893 kwam het bericht uit Indië dat het klein-kaliber geweer van 6.5 mM. koloniaal model (Steyr-Mannlicher M1895), welk indertijd ter beproeving in Indië met 100 man der Koloniale Reserve uitgezonden was, thans zeer goed bleek te voldoen. Aanvankelijk liet het zich aanzien, dat de invoering van dit zo doeltreffende wapen nog lang op zich zou laten wachten, aangezien het eerst uitgezonden rookloze buskruit niet bestand bleek te zijn tegen tropische klimaatsinvloeden. Later zou een nieuwe rookloze buskruitsoort bij de beproeving in Indië zeer goed blijken te voldoen, zodat de definitieve invoering van de nieuwe infanteriebewapening kon worden doorgezet. Omstreeks 1 september 1893 had de Kedjoeroean Karang, die zijn wederonderwerping had aangeboden en dus als onderdaan en bevriend Tamiangsch hoofd naar zijn landschap Karang was teruggekeerd, zich weer aan 's vijands zijde geschaard. Op 13 september 1893 maakte de Koloniale Reserve en een gedeelte der bezetting van Seroeway, ongeveer 100 bajonetten, gezamenlijk met Hr.Ms. Koerier een tocht op de Tamiang-rivier, om deze zover mogelijk, als het kon tot Koeala Simpang op te varen. Verder dan Tandjong Semantoh kon men wegens de diepgang van het vaartuig niet komen, de colonne debarkeerde daar en rukte een eind landwaarts in, verbrandde het huis van Radja Silang en keerde 's avonds terug, zonder een vijand gezien of een schot gelost te hebben.
