9. (Botany)(Medicine) Mattioli, Pietro Andrea. I DISCORSI DI M. PIETRO ANDREA MATTHIOLI...NE I SEI LIBRI DELLA MATERIA MEDICINALE DI PEDACIO DIOSCORIDE ANAZARBEO: CON I VERI

RITRATTI DELLA PIANTE & DE GLI ANIMALI, NUOVAMENTE AGGIUNTIVI DAL MEDESIMO. Venice. 1557. Second illustrated Italian edition. Folio, (88), 741 pp., (1), lacking final leaf, blank except for printer's device on verso. Recently rebound in full calf with a maroon morocco spine label. Some damp staining & minor soiling throughout, title page mounted & a few leaves re-hinged, paper repairs & marginal wormholes to a few leaves, mostly in the first & last several quires. About 40 of the woodcuts hand colored at an early date. Mattiolo, Pierandrea (1507-1577) Italian physician & botanist. "He was born in Siena, studied in Padua, & traveled widely in Italy to collect plants. His lengthy Commentarii on the Herbal of Dioscorides were intended as practical advice for physicians. The book was first published in Venice in 1544 & went into many editions & translations, the first in Latin, following three Italian ones, in 1554. The commentaries go beyond Dioscorides' plants to include Mattioli's own discoveries & reports from his correspondents. The two series of illustrations, one first published in the Venice edition of 1554, the larger ones appearing in a Prague version of 1562, & both copied repeatedly, are unusual in representing massed foliage, fruit, & flowers instead of single twigs or plants." (Encyclopaedia of the Renaissance). "A critical examination of the features & the sometimes complex vicissitudes of the Commentarii would constitute an interesting chapter in the history of Bibliology. Fundamental to the work's success is its conception & execution as a practical scientific treatise. It was intended for daily use by physicians, herbalists, & others, who could find descriptions & notes on medicinal plants & herbs, Greek & Latin names & synonyms, & the equivalents in other languages. The work made it possible to identify & compare its plants & herbs with those mentioned by Dioscorides & also with those found in nature. The Commentarii thus differed profoundly from translations by other authors, who generally insisted on lexical & grammatical aspects rather than on medical & botanical aims. Mattioli supported his work with new information partly derived from his direct observation of plants & herbs & partly obtained from other authors; the rest were derived from original drawings placed at his disposal by other scholars. From the scientific point of view, Mattioli's work did not always win approval. Sachs, for example, asserted that Mattioli's study of the medicinal effects of plants took priority to the observation of their morphological characteristics. Certainly Mattioli's interest in botany was not primary but proceeded from his interest in therapy, & it was medicine that led him back to the observation of nature. Mattioli's commentary of Dioscorides' text was aimed largely at the practical purpose of medicinal phytoagnosis & acquired intrinsic value both through the wealth of its descriptive details of each plant & through its accurate drawings. Mattioli may therefore be considered a member of the Vesalian school of morphological observation." (DSB) $5,500.00

16TH CENTURY GEOGRAPHY

47. (Geography) Glareanus (Henricus Loritus). DE GEOGRAPHIA LIBER UNUS, AB IPSO AUTHORE IAM NOUISSIME RECOGNITUS. Parisiis: Apud Gulielmum Caelart, in pingui Gallina, 1550. 21 woodcut diagrams in text, including a full-paged diagram of an earth-centered universe & a woodcut of twelve gores used for making globes. First Cavellat edition. 4to, 40 ff. Nineteenth century paper boards. Library labels to spine & bookplate of M.A. Principis Bvrghesii to front pastedown, library donation plate (from Bishop Thomas Beaven) dated Jan. 3, 1901 to rear pastedown. A clean copy with good margins & only minor discoloration along the edges. Inked bracket & "America" written in the margin of folio 39r next to the paragraph about America, Columbus, & Vespucci. Embossed library stamp on title page, perforated library marking to title page & folio 37, & shelf numbers in stamp & pencil to the bottom margin of A1v, all from the City Library of Springfield, MA. Very rare edition of one of the most important geographical manuals of the sixteenth century by a man described by Erasmus as 'the most important Swiss humanist' (Bietenholz. Contemporaries of Erasmus. Vol. 2.). First published in Basel in 1527, the work was revised a number of times before Glareanus's death in 1563. The work includes a report of the discoveries of Columbus & Vespucci in America - occurring on the verso of folio 39, headed 'De regionibus extra Ptolemaeum...'. Henricus Glareanus (1488-1563) professor of mathematics, philosophy & science at Basel, Paris & Freiburg was a lifelong friend & associate of Erasmus. 'Glareanus' importance as a humanist is evident from the testimony of his pupils & friends; from the chosen circle of men who received the dedications of his writings...and, of course, from his writings themselves, some of which were printed in several editions. His writings developed from his lectures & represent innovative work in several areas. This is particularly true of his editions of classical authors & to a lesser degree of his poems such as the Descriptio Helvetiae, the Panegyricum, & two books of elegies dedicated to Zwingli. While Erasmus concentrated his philological efforts primarily on critical editions of theological source materials..., Glareanus concerned himself with the much wider field of secular classical literature, especially history, mathematics, & music. Her edited Tacitus, Livy (pioneering an improved chronology), Dionysius of Halicarnassus, Horace, Ovid, Caesar, Sallust, Terence, Cicero, Boethius, Lucian, Valerius Maximus, Eutropius, Quintus Curtius Rufus, & Suetonius." Frankfurt, 1600, A-3M 6, 3N 8pp. Bound in contemporary vellum, pages browned throughout. Lazius was one of the most versatile humanists in Vienna & was later viewed as a "central figure in the cultural life of Vienna". He had originally studied liberal arts in Ingolstadt & in 1538 obtained a doctorate in medicine. He was personal physician to the Emperor Ferdinand I & from 1546 taught at the Faculty of Medicine in Vienna. He became Rector in 1560 & Royal Superintendent in 1563. But he is best known as an historian, particularly on account of his History of Vienna (Vienna Austriae) & his widely used book on the great Migrations (De Gentium Aliquot Migrationibus) & as a cartographer, with maps of Bavaria, Hungary, Greece & Austria. In 1561 he published the first printed atlas of Austria. The Migration Period, also called Barbarian Invasions or Volkerwanderung (German for "wandering of the peoples"), was a period of human migration which occurred roughly within the years of 300-700 AD in Europe, marking the transition from late antiquity to the early middle ages. These movements were catalyzed by profound changes within both the Roman Empire & the so-called 'barbarian frontier'. Migrating peoples during this period included the Goths, Vandals, Bulgars, Alans, Suebi, Frisians, & Franks among other Germanic, Iranic & Slavic tribes. The woodcuts in De Gentium depicting these peoples were designed, drawn, & cut by the author. VD 16, L 845; Adams L 349; Lipperheide Bf 1; NDB XIV, 14. $1,750.00

Lincoln's Inn. Throughout the text are beautiful crible' initials in three sizes, & head-and-tail pieces. Occasional manuscript marginalia, shaved by the binder. "COMINES (COMMYNES), PHILLIPE DE (ca. 1447 - 18 October 1511), outstanding chronicler of the fifteenth century. He began his career in the service of Charles the Bold, who became Duke of Burgundy on his father's death in 1467. In August 1472 Comines left Charles & became the friend & confidant of Louis XI, who granted him attractive financial benefits & made him his chamberlain & leading minister in charge of political affairs. The first five books of his Memoires concern the reigns of Louis XI & Charles VIII, & the last three books end with the coronation of Louis XII. Comines claims repeatedly that he is telling the truth about the events that he discusses, & he always states when he was not an eyewitness of the event. Comine's art may be said to be the opposite of Froissart's; it is without picturesqueness or color. In fact the Memories have no literary pretense. They were composed originally as source material for the Archbishop of Vienna, Angelo Cato, who wanted to write the history of Louis XI. Comines is more interested in what events reveal about men than in the events themselves. Without being a great thinker, he had an original vision of the world: he believed in the importance of Providence as a power capable of controlling the equilibrium of forces in the world. Providence, according to him, could counterbalance the individual excesses of men. When describing war, Comines understates its myth & insists on its goriness & inhumanity. He also denounces the weaknesses & sins of the ruling classes & has faith only in diplomats & in secret emissaries." (Guy Mermier in "Dictionary of the Middle Ages", Vol. 3). "More than one authority finds Tournes the "best printer" of his century in Europe. He was, surely, a superb technician & delightful innovator in book design."
