Manuscript journal written on the Major’s Creek gold diggings, near Braidwood, New South Wales, 1852
BARNETT, Alexander

An important and early gold rush journal, kept by a Scottish miner within a year of the announcement of the discovery of gold in New South Wales.

Octavo size notebook, disbound but with original cloth spine and stitching intact, the first page inscribed ‘Alexander Barnett, January 1852. From Aberdeen to London thence to Sydney’, and ‘Note: 5 letters enclosed’ (these letters are no longer present), containing [86] pp of manuscript entries closely written in ink, being a daily record of Barnett’s journey to Australia (the first two thirds of the journal) and his experiences on the Major’s Creek diggings near Braidwood on the New South Wales gold fields (the final third of the journal). The contents entirely legible and the pages clean, the paper with a mild amount of toning.

The discovery of gold by Hargraves and his associates at Ophir, near Bathurst, was officially announced on 14 May 1851, sparking gold fever in the Colony, and within months the great influx of prospectors began arriving from overseas. Alongside veterans of the California rush were tens of thousands of inexperienced prospectors from North America, the British Isles and continental Europe, all bound for the gold fields of New South Wales and Victoria to seek their fortunes. Alexander Barnett, a reasonably well educated Scotsman from Aberdeen (we do not learn his profession), was one such gold rush immigrant. By the time he arrived in Sydney early in 1852, gold had been discovered at numerous sites in the Colony; including at Major’s Creek on the Southern Tablelands in October, 1851. The rush at Major’s Creek, located between Braidwood and Araluen near the upper reaches of the Shoalhaven River, quickly attracted thousands of prospectors. The Major’s Creek diggings turned out to be one of the richest in New South Wales. (A modern underground mine on Major’s Creek, Dargues Reef, is due to begin operations in late 2013, and expects an annual yield of 50,000 ounces from the 2.17 million tonnes of ore at the site).

Journal of an overland expedition in Australia from Moreton Bay to Port Essington, LEICHHARDT, Ludwig 1813-1848

a distance of upwards of 3000 miles, during the years 1844–1845. London
: T. & W. Boone, 1847. First edition. Two volumes, octavo, original embossed olive cloth boards, spine with gilt lettering, pp 8 (publisher’s advertisements), xx, 544, frontispiece and [6] aquatint plates (1 folding), 8 (a second set of publisher’s advertisements), firmly bound, contents bright, a fine copy, Ferguson, 4571; with the rare separately issued, hand coloured map on three sheets (as issued: note that the maps are not laid down on linen like the Davidson Collection set which sold at auction in 2006), each sheet 650 x 800 mm, all maps extremely well preserved, with no tearing or evidence of repair; one with mild toning in sections and a few light marks, all folding to octavo size and housed in the original portfolio with matching embossed olive green cloth boards and original blue ribbon ties.
Rare primary issues of this important account, published after Leichhardt had already set out on his final expedition. Wantrup, 138a & 139.

Leichhardt’s first expedition, which took over a year to complete, was one of the most significant journeys of exploration carried out in Australia in the nineteenth century, opening up much of the rich interior of northern Australia. The expedition arrived at Port Essington in December, 1845, with the loss of only one of its members (the ornithologist, John Gilbert), having set out from southern Queensland in September of the previous year. The fact that Leichhardt and his party were to disappear without trace on his next expedition, and that his ultimate fate remains a matter of conjecture, has understandably contributed to the ongoing fascination that this explorer holds for historians and the public alike. The brass nameplate from Leichhardt’s gun, acquired by the National Museum of Australia in 2006, was reputedly discovered in a boab tree in the vicinity of Sturt Creek, between the Tanami and Great Sandy Deserts on the western side of the border between Western Australia and the Northern Territory border. This is compelling evidence that Leichhardt did not meet his fate in the Gulf of Carpentaria region, but remarkably managed to traverse two-thirds of the continent from east to west before he perished.

Margaret Preston Recent Paintings 1929
PRESTON, Margaret

Sydney : Art in Australia, 1929. Quarto, folding white buckram clamshell box with gilt-lettered title label (scuffed, front joint split), original ribbon ties, containing the following elements:

1. A black card folio, inside which is a copy of the publication ‘Margaret Preston Recent Paintings 1929’ quarto, illustrated wrappers, pp. [42], printed in red and black, nine black and white plates numbered 1 to 9, foreword by Leon Gellert and Sydney Ure Smith, text titled 92 aphorisms by Margaret Preston and others limited to 250 numbered copies, printed by Percy Green at the Green Press, Sydney, very fine.

2. An original colour woodcut ‘Mosman Bridge 1927’ measuring 250 x 185 mm, signed in pencil lower right, tipped on the upper margin to a backing card, very fine.

3. Thirteen folded cards numbered plates 10 to 23, each with a colour reproduction of Margaret Preston paintings

4. An additional folding card portfolio titled ‘Margaret Preston Recent Paintings Duplicate set of Colour Plates’ housing fourteen colour reproductions.

The printer’s copy, with the business card of Perce Green of the Green Press pasted to the inside of the black card folio, and a typed note also included which states ‘This Margaret Preston Book was designed in 1929 in the blackest face procurable at that time, and one that harmonised with the contrasty [sic] wood-cuts. As this is part of the only set I possess, will you kindly return’.

This rare and exquisite deluxe folio, produced at the height of Preston’s popularity, was issued with one of two woodcuts, ‘Mosman Bridge’ as here (Butler 113), or ‘Flowers in Jug’ (Butler 137). It is assumed that each were printed in an edition of 125, but ‘it is not known if the full edition was completed’ (Butler, p. 137). Of the copies which were completed, many have now been split for the original woodcut and colour plates. The present copy is complete, and is a superb association copy with an interesting note from the printer.

Ethnological photographic gallery of the various races of men
DAMMANN, Carl; DAMMAN, F.W.

Cover title: Races of mankind. London: Trübner & Co., [1876]. First English edition. Oblong folio, green embossed cloth, upper board with gilt lettering (boards with a little discolouration), silk endpapers, all edges gilt, title page and 24 pages of plates comprised of 167 albumen print photographs mounted recto and verso of 12 leaves of card, each page with printed frames and captions, thin white paper interleaving intact, sparse foxing but the leaves in remarkably fresh condition and the albumen prints for the most part strong and with good tonal range. An excellent copy. Extremely rare and important, one of the earliest photographic works on ethnology. Only three copies are recorded in Australian collections (State Library of New South Wales; State Library of South Australia; Royal Geographical Society of South Australia).

Carl Dammann’s comprehensive Ethnological photographic gallery of the various races of men was completed by his brother Friedrich (a language and music teacher living in Huddersfield, Yorkshire) following Carl’s sudden death in 1874. The sections are arranged as follows: I. Germanic types II. Romanic types III. Slavonians, Finns IV. Types of the Balkan Peninsula V. Arabia, Persia VI. India, Western part VII. India, Eastern part VIII. Sunda Islands IX. Philippine Islands X. China XI. Japan XII. North of Asia XIII. Mediterranean Africa XIV. Niger District XV. Congo XVI. Zanzibar Coast XVII. Cape Colony XVIII. N. America, Northern part XIX. N. America, Southern part XX. S. America, Eastern part XXI. Amazon District XXII. Cordillera District XXIII. Continent of Australia XXIV. Polynesia, Oceania.

Carl Dammann was a Hamburg photographer who, in the early 1870s, had been engaged to copy a large part of the collection of ethnological photographs in the Goddefroy Museum, Hamburg for the Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte. Many of these photographs were eventually published by Dammann in his major work, Anthropologisches-Ethnologisches Album in Photographien (1872−4). Table 3 in AEA has seventeen albumen prints of Australian Aborigines, none with any acknowledgement of the original photographer. Three are identifiable as having been taken in northwest Victoria in the late 1860s by Thomas Washbourne, and several others were taken around the same time in Brisbane by Daniel Marquis and Rockhampton by Joseph Wilder. Of these seventeen prints, five are included in the album presently offered, namely Watschandi (top row, far left, labelled in the AEA as being from the Gulf of Carpentaria); the pair of shots of the Ashburton Ranges man (top row, far right); and S. Australian (bottom row, far right).

The eight photographs of Australian Aborigines, Plate XXIII, are mounted recto of the final leaf and are all in standard carte de visite format (each approximately 88 x 53 mm). The printed captions beneath these photographs are: Watschandi (1); Ashburton Ranges (2-3); S. Australian woman (4); S. Australian man (5); Woman and child. Queensland (6); Women of Queensland (7); S. Australian [man] (8). It appears likely that the original photographs were collected by Amalie Dietrich of the Goddefroy Museum, Hamburg, between 1867 and 1872 (see Morton, Christopher. Curator of Photographs and Manuscripts, Pitt Rivers Museum. Rethinking Pitt-Rivers: Ten Queensland Photographs in the Founding Collection of the Pitt Rivers Museum. Online article published by the Pitt Rivers Museum, revised May, 2011).

Nouvelle-Holland; Port Jackson: Famille de Sauvages en Voyage

[Anon., after PELLION, Alphonse; LEROY, Sebastien; FORGET, E.; BOISSEAU, Jacques Messidor]

Circa 1840. Watercolour on paper, 620 x 510 mm (sheet), manuscript caption in watercolour in German at upper margin NEU-HOLLAENDER, PORT JACKSON, manuscript caption in ink in German lower left: Nach Freycinet, Voy. aut. du monde bl. 102. VIII. Homo australasicus. Bory. In fine condition.

This mid-nineteenth century work by an anonymous German artist is after plate 102 in Louis de Freycinet’s Voyage autour du monde. Atlas historique (circa 1825), an image engraved by Forget and Boisseau after a drawing by Sebastien Leroy, who in turn had worked from original sketches made by Alphonse Pellion on the voyage of the Uranie in 1819. The name Bory at the end of the small inscription is a misleading reference (or erroneous attribution of the work) to Jean Baptiste Bory de Saint-Vincent, the naturalist who sailed on Baudin’s 1800-1803 voyage - not Freycinet’s later voyage in the Uranie.

A noble fragment : being a leaf of The Gutenberg Bible 1450 - 55

GUTENBERG, Johannes (c. 1398 - 1468)

With a bibliographical essay by A. Edward Newton. New York : Gabriel Wells, 1921. Designed by Bruce Rogers and printed by William Edwin Rudge. Folio, full black blindstamped gilt-lettered morocco by Stikeman & Co. (corners a little rubbed, a few mm loss to foot of spine), gilt dentelles, [6] pp. preliminary text, with an original leaf of the Gutenberg Bible tipped-in. The leaf measures 388 x 287 mm, printed on recto and verso, black gothic lettering of forty-two lines in double columns, rubricated in red, with headlines, chapter numbers, and large initial letters in red and blue, being three two-line initials (two ‘E’s’ and one ‘P’), three Roman numeral verse numbers, and the headline. A very good example with wide margins, some minor foxing, the ink black and crisp. The text is the Vulgate Latin text of Jeremiah Chapters 15 and 16 in their entirety, with the closing ten lines of Chapter 14 and first eight lines of Chapter 17. “Then said the LORD unto me, Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, yet my mind could not be toward this people: cast them out of my sight, and let them go forth.”

A LEAF FROM THE FIRST WESTERN BOOK PRINTED BY MOovable TYPE.

“Its printers were competing in the market hitherto supplied by the producers of high-class manuscripts. The design of the book and the layout of the book were therefore based on the book-hand and manuscript design of the day, and a very high standard of press-work was required—and obtained—to enable the new mechanical product to compete successfully with its hand-produced rivals. Standards were set in quality of paper and blackness of ink, in design and professional skill, which the printers of later generations have found difficult to maintain.” (Printing and the Mind of Man). Only forty-eight copies of the Bible are known, most of which are incomplete. The provenance of this leaf is the imperfect Mannheim-Zouch-Sabin copy, divided into leaves and sections by New York bookseller Gabriel Wells nearly a century ago.

The Gutenberg Bible, the first complete book printed in Western culture using the radical technology of movable pieces of type, is perhaps the most famous and important book in the world. Complete examples are now rarely procurable in the marketplace, yet a single leaf, extracted from an incomplete copy of the Bible by New York dealer Gabriel Wells in 1921, captivates the imagination when one contemplates the impact this revolution of the Renaissance had on humanity.

Some account of my doings in Australia from 1855 to 1862.

REYNOLDS, Frederick

An apparently unpublished autobiographical account of life on the Victorian goldfields during the 1850s.

Circa 1870. Manuscript written in ink on [27] pp, being one gathering from a contemporary quarto size notebook, the text complete in itself, titled on first page Some account of my doings in Australia from 1855 to 1862; written in one hand throughout and signed by the author Frederick Reynolds at the foot of the final page; beneath this signature is written in pencil in a slightly later hand (probably that of a family member) Husband of Guglielma Melford; the handwriting throughout the manuscript is bold, neat and entirely legible, and Reynolds’ expression is that of a literate, reasonably well-educated person; the thickish notepaper, of a type consistent with an 1870s dating, is toned around the edges but is extremely well preserved and shows no signs of brittleness; the black ink displays a higher level of oxidisation (ie. is slightly browner) on the exposed first page than on the inner pages of the manuscript, as should be expected.

The narrative, probably written down within a decade of his return to England, reveals that Frederick Reynolds was an English miner from Bridgewater in Somerset. It was probably based on an original diary kept by Reynolds, as the retention of the precise dates of certain events tends to suggest. The memoir follows Frederick Reynolds from Ballarat to Maryborough, to Dunolly and back again, as he seeks his fortune. Included in this manuscript is a lengthy description of Reynolds’ first night on the goldfields at Magpie Gully near Ballarat, a description almost cinematic in quality, so effectively does it evoke the sights and sounds of the miners’ encampment. Reynolds also provides graphic accounts of dramatic events to which he was an eye-witness, including a flash flood at a miners’ camp near Buninyong and a bush fire in the Dividing Range north of Ballarat. His eye for detail is exceptional. The unique manuscript appears to have been written exclusively for Reynolds’ own family or close friends, as a reference to ‘Elma’ on the final page presumes the familiar knowledge that she is his wife, Guglielma.

Louis XV forbids his subjects to conduct commerce in the South Seas
[PHILIPPE, DUC D'ORLEANS; LOUIS XV, KING OF FRANCE]

Manuscript letter, single folio sheet, dated 16 February 1716, signed Louis (in the hand of Louis XV’s secretary), countersigned by Louis Phélypeaux, Marquis de La Vrillière, Secretary of State, addressed to Cardin Le Bret, member of the parliament of Provence and nephew of the regent, the Duc d'Orléans, stating that a royal edict has been sent to the parliament of Provence 'which explains the circumstances in which merchants of my Kingdom must obtain passports from me, to which edict I append a declaration forbidding any of my subjects to conduct commerce in the South Seas'; the verso with address of Le Bret; the document is complete, legible and remarkably fresh, with original folds.

The royal edict alluded to in the present letter, ostensibly forbidding French subjects to conduct trade in the Pacific, was designed to allay Spanish fears that its monopoly of the rich resources along the western seabord of the Americas - namely the silver mines of Mexico and Peru - was under threat from the French. In reality the situation was quite different. While flattering the Spanish and officially appearing to discourage this type of trade, France turned a blind eye toward its own merchants rounding Cape Horn, and from the end of the seventeenth to well into the eighteenth century, French private companies conducted many voyages to the west coast of the Americas.

Loto des 5 parties du monde. Race humaines, productions végétales et animales

Saussine, L. (publisher)

Paris: Saussine, Edit., [circa 1890]. Box of thick card, 430 x 340 x 45 mm, the lid with superb chromolithograph illustration featuring five female figures symbolising the five regions of the world, surrounded by images of the flora and fauna of the entire world arranged by continent; the box contains twelve chromolithographed playing boards, each 290 x 160 mm and having as a theme a different region of the world, each board with eight recessed windows showing a black and white lithographed and numbered illustration of an ethnic type, plant or animal from that region; 96 small, numbered chromolithographed cards, each 33 x 37 mm and corresponding to each of the 96 windows on the playing boards, are contained within their original cotton pouch, together with a second pouch of circular playing counters of thick card; the game is complete and in remarkably well preserved, original condition.

A beautifully designed and illustrated game of geographical lotto, intended to teach children about the inhabitants and natural history of the various regions of the globe. The twelve playing boards are divided equally amongst the six regions of North America, South America, Europe, Asia, Africa and Oceania. The two Oceania boards are devoted to the eastern and western spheres, with the illustrated windows and their matching chromolithographed cards representing the following: kiwi; crocodile; kangaroo; lyrebird; cockatoo; water buffalo; whale; coconut palm; Javanese; Malay; orangutan; platypus; sheep station; Australian flag; Australian Aborigine; Tasmanian Aborigine.

BLIGH, William (1754 - 1817)

and the subsequent voyage of part of the crew in the ship’s boat, from Tofoa, one of the Friendly Islands, to Timor, a Dutch settlement in the East Indies. Written by Lieutenant William Bligh. Dublin : L. White, P. Byrne, J. Moore, J. Jones, B. Domin, Grueber and McAllister; W. Jones, and R. White, 1790. Octavo, expertly bound in modern quarter-calf over marbled boards, pp. vii (small paper flaw to half-title), 144 (a stain affecting the fore edge of first few leaves), a very good example. The first Irish edition of Bligh’s narrative, printed the same year as the English first edition, highly uncommon. Hill notes, “Unlike most Dublin printings, this Irish first edition is rarely found.” Ferguson mistakenly calls for ‘a chart of track’ in his collation, but this edition (unlike the London edition) was issued without charts, maps or plates. As Kroepelien points out, the copy Ferguson sighted may have been grangerized from another edition, possibly the British octavo from the same year. Ferguson 72; Hill 134; Kroepelien 88.

With eighteen illustrations by Norman Lindsay. Sydney : The Shepherd Press, 1946. Octavo, cloth in dustjacket (very good with a little corner wear), pp 160, 13 black and white plates, 5 text illustrations, reproducing Lindsay watercolours and drawings. This copy inscribed on the front blank ‘For Molly Scully, Douglas Stewart 13/12/46’ and further signed by Norman Lindsay with a fine original pen drawing of one of the police officers in the book. The drawing is approximately 100 mm tall and is a carefully considered sketch - the preparatory under-drawing in pencil displaying the care with which Lindsay composed this delightful addition. The book is inscribed to Mary “Molly” Scully, who was the sister of artist Margaret Coen (1909 - 1993), one-time lover of Norman Lindsay in the 1930s, and later the author; Douglas Stewart’s wife.

The first work of fiction written in Swedish to have an Australian setting.

Almqvist's storyteller, who recounts the adventure to a gathering in a Bordeaux wine merchant's, refers to Australia as both New Holland and Ulmaroa, a term Almqvist had borrowed from the Swedish geographer Daniel Djurberg, and which originally derives from the account of Cook's first voyage.

Journal d’un voyage autour du monde, en 1768, 1769, 1770, 1771

contenant les divers événemens du voyage; avec la relation des contrées nouvellement découvertes dans l’hémisphere méridional ... ; traduit de l’anglois par M. de Fréville.

Paris : Saillant & Nyon, 1773. Duodecimo, quarter vellum over marbled boards, re-backed gilt-stamped burgundy label, 288 pp, some foxing. This work is a translation of Journal in French of a voyage round the world in His Majesty’s ship Endeavour, first published the previous year (also by Saillant & Nyon) as a “supplement to the voyage of M. Bougainville”. The Mitchell Library notes in their catalogue entry: “Authorship of this work has been variously attributed to James Matra, Banks, Solander, and others. (cf. Beddie, 693). However, extensive research attributes it with some authority to James Mario Matra. (cf. Alan Frost, ‘The precarious life of James Mario Matra’, Carlton, Vic. : Miegunyah Press, 1995, pp. 5-6)”. The first English edition, published in 1771, preceded Hawkesworth’s official account by two years.

Treatment of the horse in Australia
G.H. [HAMILTON, George 1812-1883]; Photographer unknown

The prototype of the first Australian publication to use original photographs as illustrations. [Probably early 1864]. Unpublished album containing eleven mounted albumen photographs of George Hamilton’s drawings used as illustrations in his published work The horse: its treatment in Australia (Adelaide: Printed by J.T. Shaw, 1864). Oblong octavo, full original calf with gilt ruled borders and gilt stamped lettering to front. Treatment of the horse in Australia, G.H. (note the album title is a variant of the final published work’s), 11 albumen print photographs, each 85 x 135 mm, mounted recto only of 11 leaves of thick card, darkening of the lower edges of the binding and leaves due to exposure to fire at some point, but the albumen prints and inscriptions are in remarkably fine condition, the binding loosening and one leaf detached, but the purpose-made album is complete.

Ship board letters written on the Duchess of Northumberland, the last female convict transport, 1852

INGLIS, Gilbert James

Two letters written on board the convict transport Duchess of Northumberland by the ship’s purser, Gilbert James Inglis, while awaiting sailing at Woolwich. The Duchess of Northumberland was bound for Van Diemen’s Land, carrying 219 female convicts, and the letters provide an eyewitness account of the convicts coming on board ship and observations on their attitude and demeanour: In particular they provide important commentary on the lewd nature of the songs the women seemed to constantly sing. One letter is dated November 21, 1852 and is addressed to Inglis’ brother, John, at Trinity House, Tower Hill. The other is undated, but was almost certainly written within a few days of the dated letter; and is addressed to several family members (including John). Each letter is written on a single sheet of writing paper, folded into 4pp quarto; both letters are complete, entirely legible and remarkably well preserved.

Two voyages to New South Wales and Van Diemen’s Land, REID, Thomas with a description of the present conditions of that interesting colony : including facts and observations relative to the state and management of convicts of both sexes. Also reflections of seduction and its general consequences. London : Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, 1822. Octavo, half-calf over marbled boards, expertly rebacked, pp 391, occasional foxing (mainly to preliminaries), an attractive copy.

Reid was a surgeon in the Royal Navy. “Encouraged by Elizabeth Fry, at the end of 1817 he made a voyage in the Neptune to New South Wales as superintendent of male convicts. In 1820 he went in the same capacity in the female convict ship Morley” (Oxford National Dictionary of Biography). This treatise is largely a scathing attack on the conditions the convicts were forced to endure, both throughout their arduous journey to the colonies and upon their arrival. He also discusses the perils of holding both male and female convicts on the one ship, with reference to the mutiny aboard the Lady Shore in 1798 which resulted in significant bloodshed. An important work on convict history in Australia.

Between 1963 and 1988 the Swedish artist and writer Gunnar Brusewitz (1924-2004) designed diplomas for the Nobel Prize in Literature, which were presented to recipients along with a gold medal originally designed by Erik Lindberg in 1902. The diplomas Brusewitz created included the one presented to Australian writer Patrick White in 1973, a watercolour design inspired by White's novel, The Tree of Man. In May, 1974, White presented both his Nobel Prize medal and diploma to the State Library of New South Wales. White remains the only Australian writer to have been awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature.

This important presentation copy of White’s 1955 novel The tree of man is inscribed on the front free endpaper by the author: ‘Gunnar Brusewitz, with thanks for the Diploma. Patrick White. Sydney 1974’, and is a fine copy in like dustjacket of the 1974 U.K. edition (London : Jonathan Cape); loosely inserted is a photocopy of an essay on Patrick White by Hans-Göran Ekman (Patrick White före hemkomsten. Kring ett tema i några tidiga romaner), published in Bonniers Litterära Magasin, 1986 Nr.4, pp 237-241; the photocopy is inscribed by Ekman for Brusewitz: ‘Till Gunnar Brusewitz, vars diploma inspirerat denna uppsats! Manuscript journals of the first Presbyterian minister in Queensland, 1851-53
MACLEOD, Walter Ross

The Reverend Walter Ross Macleod was the first minister in charge of a Presbyterian congregation in Queensland. A member of the Free Church, he arrived in Moreton Bay from Edinburgh in August 1851 and preached primarily at the Grey Street Church in South Brisbane until he was forced to resign in November 1852 due to ill health. After staying briefly with his sister, who had emigrated from Scotland to Queensland that year and married, he returned to Scotland in 1853. The journals, which cover most of Macleod's stay in Australia (the second volume covering the short period from September-November 1852 is absent), are offered together with a small archive of manuscript ephemera relating to Macleod and his immediate family.

Manuscript documents relating to the prize San Cristoforo, captured by HMS Anson, 1804

[1.] 1806. May 29. King’s Warrant. Grant of two-thirds of the Proceeds of the Spanish Ship San Cristoforo and her Cargo, and one quarter of the Bullion if any to the Captain, Officers and Crew of His Majesty’s Ship Anson. Single folio sheet, folded into 4 sides, some tears along the fold lines, otherwise excellent. The Spanish ship San Cristoforo was captured in the Mediterranean by HMS Anson, under the command of William Cracraft, on December 8 1804. She was carrying a cargo of hides and other products from Montevideo in the New World and was bound for Barcelona. The Anson was at the time acting independently of the rest of the British fleet, under the specific orders of Lord Viscount Nelson, and after the capture Cracraft sent the Spanish ship to Malta, where the value of the prize was assessed. The Judge of the Vice Admiralty Court of the island of Malta determined in April 1805 that the ship’s cargo be sold at Malta. The proceeds of the sale of goods - a sum of £12,133 - was remitted in bills to the Bank of England. This document, bearing the large signature of George III at the head, records the royal decision to grant a large portion of the prize San Cristoforo to its captors, with any unclaimed shares of the prize to be given to the Greenwich Hospital. [2.] 1806. June 13. The copy of the Power of Attorney from the officers & crew of HMS Anson to John Scott & others - omitting the Signatures, by the direction or advice of Mr. Kaye. Single folio sheet, folded into 4 sides, several pin holes, otherwise fine. [3. 1806. [PAINE, John; BAYLISS, Charles, attributed]

Sydney : Charles Potter, Government Printer, 1889. Album of mounted [120] albumen silver print photographs. Oblong quarto, full red morocco blind stamped in gilt with coat of arms of New South Wales and lettering, silk lining papers, all edges gilt, title page with colophon, [120] albumen silver prints, each approximately 140 x 190 mm, mounted recto and verso of [60] leaves of thick card with printed blue borders and printed caption labels, the photographs in uniformly fine condition, the leaves with occasional and minimal foxing to the margins, an additional albumen print of a drawing of the planned Railway Institute (completed in 1891) with manuscript caption is laid in at the front of the album.

An exceptional album of photographic views of Sydney and environs, commissioned and printed by the New South Wales Government, probably in very small numbers and for presentation to visiting dignitaries. The photographs, although without studio imprints, can be attributed to the highly successful Sydney commercial photographers John Paine and Charles Bayliss. Despite the fact that the album is dated 1889, it includes a photograph of the Garden Palace (the Sydney Exhibition Building), which was destroyed by fire in 1882, suggesting that the huge array of work in this album has a fairly broad range of dates, in fact from around 1879 to 1889.

Archive of material relating to Service on HMAS Sydney
HUGHAN, William J.

Correspondence, sketches, photographs, printed ephemera and naval realia documenting the wartime service of William James Hughan, a Gunner in the Royal Navy. Hughan served in the Royal Australian Navy during the Second World War, including a period of two years as a crew member on board HMAS Sydney, which he left a mere two months before her fateful encounter with the disguised German raider, Kormoran. In what remains the most tragic event in Australian naval history, the light cruiser HMAS Sydney was sunk on 19 November 1941 off the coast of Western Australia, after an engagement with the Kormoran. Her full complement of 645 crew was lost, and accounts of the battle, provided by some of the 313 German survivors, were not published until the end of the war.

The archive is housed in Hughan’s wooden sea chest, occupying its entire space (500 x 330 x 290 mm). Hughan was a proficient artist, and included is his pocket sketchbook, with pencil drawings made on board HMAS Sydney in the Mediterranean. Among his sketches are depictions of the engagement with the Italian destroyer Espero, and of HMAS Sydney’s finest hour, her sinking of the Italian light cruiser Bartolomeo Colleoni. The most poignant item in the archive is a registered letter sent by Hughan to the Secretary of the Warrant Officer’s Mess on HMAS Sydney, dated 20 November 1941, the day after the Sydney was lost. Hughan writes: “Please pass on my regards to all the mess and sincere good wishes. May your lousy luck soon change”. The envelope is marked ‘Return to sender on Navy Department’s Instruction’.

A printed vellum leaf from the first edition of the Constitutiones of Clemens V
CLEMENS V (1264-1314, Pope)

[Mainz : Johann Fust and Peter Schoeffer, 1460]. 368 x 267 mm. Double column, with 72 [of 79] lines of commentary by Johannes Andreae surrounding the text. Rubrics in red, paragraph marks in blue and red, one two-line initial in blue. Removed from a binding, trimmed at lower edge with loss of seven lines; also trimmed at hinge edge with loss of a third of one column of the commentary, 60 x 20 mm edge loss to upper section of the same edge, four small perforations in the text section with negligible loss, small white circle of paper affixed to the upper right corner with manuscript numeral 'iv', the print legible and clear; the surface of the vellum with an acceptable amount of toning and light soiling.

An extremely early and rare printed vellum leaf from the first edition of a book of canon law by the French-born Pope Clement V (1264-1314). Following his election to Pope in 1305, Clement V was responsible for the creation of what became known as the Avignon Papacy, refusing to move his court to Rome. For the next 67 years the Papal See was to remain in Avignon under a succession of seven French-born Popes. Principally for this reason, Dante consigned Clement V to the Eighth Circle of Hell in his 'Inferno'.

The Mainz printers Fust and Schoeffer were the immediate successors to Gutenberg, taking over his printing equipment after Gutenberg had essentially become bankrupt. Fust (c. 1400-1466), a goldsmith who had been Gutenberg’s financial backer, was awarded Gutenberg’s press as a partial repayment of Gutenberg’s debt. Schoeffer had been Gutenberg's assistant, and Fust employed him to to run what was to become the first commercially successful printing firm. The Constitutiones was the fourth book printed by the team of Fust and Schoeffer.

Kangaroo; kookaburra; opossum; lyre birds; emu
KING, Henry (1855-1923)

Circa 1890. Group of five silver albumen print photographs (each 205 x 150 mm), laid down on original card mounts, with captions in the negative: 775. Australian Laughing Jackass; 776. Australian Opossum; 421. Lyre Birds; 785. Australian Emu; 787. Australian Kangaroo. The studio imprint of H. King Photo, Sydney appears in the negative beside each caption. The photographs are in fine condition, with a rich tonal range and excellent detail.

These images show what are obviously taxidermy specimens, arranged in small tableaux with representations of their natural habitat, much like museum displays. Three of the glass negatives of these photographs are held in the Tyrrell Photographic Collection of the Powerhouse Museum, which acquired a large collection of the negatives of Henry King, Charles Kerry and other photographers from Australian Consolidated Press in 1985. (Tyrrell had originally purchased the negatives from King’s estate in 1923). The Powerhouse collection includes emu (85/1285-6130); kangaroo (85/1285-615), and lyre birds (85/1285-312).

Although we cannot state with any certainty the identity of the taxidermist who prepared these animals, there is an interesting connection which runs between the celebrated taxidermy business of Tost and Rohu, James Tyrrell and Henry King: in 1923 Tyrrell purchased Tost and Rohu’s taxidermy and Aboriginal and South Sea Island artefacts and curios business, as well as King’s glass negatives.

Spenser’s Faerie Queene

SPENSER, Edmund; (WALTER CRANE, illustrator)

Edited by Thomas J. Wise. London: George Allen, 1894-97. Quarto, nineteen parts in original illustrated wrappers, illustrated by Crane throughout. The deluxe edition printed on Japanese vellum, limited to 28 copies of which 25 were for sale. A standard edition was also published. A very fine set with some creasing to the lower yapp edge. Originally in the collection of the Brooklyn Public Library (deaccessioned, without any ex libris markings at all), in custom folding cases which while now split have housed the set in exceptional condition. Magnificently illustrated by Crane and a highpoint of Arts and Crafts publishing. Masse p. 47.

Published by Edmund Spenser in two parts, in 1590 and 1597, The Faerie Queene is the longest poem in the English language. An allegorical epic inspired by the works of Virgil, it parallels the virtues and chivalry of the knights of the Arthurian realm with the morals and incorruptibility of the Tudor dynasty of Spenser’s day, and so for obvious reasons the poem was received extremely favourably by Queen Elizabeth I (on whom the Faerie Queene is modelled) and her court. As Spenser fell under the spell of Mediaeval romances in crafting his poem, employing a deliberately archaised language in order to create a magical yet faux atmosphere, so Walter Crane became similarly entranced by the stories of noble deeds, heroism and chivalry which are told in each of the epic’s books. Indeed, the subject matter of Spenser’s poem was perfect for writers and artists of the late nineteenth century Gothic revival, and although it inspired a plethora of illustrated editions around this time, either complete or abridged, it is Crane’s collaborative effort with Wise, particularly in this deluxe edition of such rare beauty, that is generally accepted as the nonpareil illustrated edition of The Faerie Queene.

The Methodist missionary, Reverend George Brown, resided on this small island group between 1875 and 1881. He established the first mission there on the previously uninhabited island of Ulu, one of nine islands in the Duke of York group. It seems likely that Brown had some involvement in the creation of this pamphlet - at the very least in providing the raw linguistic materials for it. Brown had previously published the first book on the language of the Duke of York Islands (or indeed on any of the languages of New Britain), Na buk na wawera ma a kum kelekele (Sydney: Joseph Cook & Co, printers, 1879).

Clarence and the goblins; or, under the earth.
GREEN, Henry Mackenzie (eleven years of age)

With portrait of the author; and photograph of illustration drawn by him. Sydney : Public Library Press, 1892. Octavo, gilt-lettered cloth, pp. 8, frontispiece portrait, illustration after a drawing by Green. Preface by James Norton, the author’s grandfather; signed by him. A charming illustrated story about an encounter between a boy and a goblin, written by eleven year old Green, child of obvious literary talent who went on to be a man of great standing in the world of Australian books. Henry Mackenzie Green (1881 - 1962) was appointed University Librarian to the University of Sydney in 1921, lectured widely on Australian literature, and wrote or contributed to a number of books on its history. This humble yet enchanting example of his juvenilia was certainly printed in small numbers on a private basis for distribution to family and friends.

Wild Australian Children
[FREDRICKS, Charles D.]
Buffalo: New York: Warren Johnson & Co., circa 1864. Promotional card with colour lithograph design, after a photograph by Charles D. Fredricks, carte de visite format (102 x 67 mm), printed caption and publisher’s imprint in lower margin, verso blank. In excellent condition, with some very mild toning to the card verso.

A portrait of two microencephalic sideshow ‘freaks’, whose physical appearance led them to be referred to at the time by promoters and commentators as ‘pinheads’. The children were billed as Hoomio and Lola, who had purportedly been found in the interior of Australia.

The Garden Palace
PAINE, John (attributed)

Circa 1880. Albumen print photograph, 110 x 180 mm, oval image 90 x 125 mm, laid down on its original album leaf of thick card, no photographer’s imprint, contemporary manuscript caption in French to lower margin of the mount: ‘Palais de l’Exposition’; a strong print in good condition.

The Garden Palace, built to house the Sydney International Exhibition of 1879, was destroyed by fire in 1882. This view shows the Macquarie Street entrance, and was probably taken in late 1879 or early 1880. The photograph came with a group of albumen prints collected by a French traveller who visited Melbourne and Sydney around 1880.

Primroses

THORPE, John Hall (1874-1947)

Circa 1922. Coloured woodcut, image 165 x 152 mm, sheet 275 x 230 mm, titled and signed by the artist in pencil beneath image, imprinted at lower margin of sheet. Published by Hall Thorpe, London. Copyright U.S.A. 1922. Fine.

The Australian expatriate artist Hall Thorpe arrived in England in 1902. His woodcuts, particularly those of flowers, expressed his ideal of a decorative, domestic aesthetic. From around 1920 these woodcuts, ‘democratic’ in the sense that they were affordable and could be enjoyed by people in their homes, proved enormously successful for Thorpe internationally. The woodcut we offer here, titled Primroses, is reproduced in the most important monograph on Hall Thorpe’s work, by Richard King (editor) and Robert and Ingrid Holden (contributors), Coloured woodcuts / Hall Thorpe (Sydney, Print Room Press, 1980, plate 26, p 65).
