3. ZINOVIEV, G. MIROVAYA REVOLUTSIYA I KOMMUNISTICHESKI INTERNATIONAL [WORLD REVOLUTION AND COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL]

Speech in Galey, 14 October 1920.
A. Leo – design of covers.
Sergey Chekhonin – Zinoviev’s profile.
Mstislav Dobuzhinskii – dropped capital.
Petrograd, Communist International publishing, 1920.
98 pp., 8vo, in original illustrated wrappers, very good condition.

Grigory Yevseevich Zinoviev (1883 – 1936) – bolshevik, head of the Communist International (first Chairman of the Comintern’s Executive Committee from 1919 to 1926), architect of several failed attempts to transform Germany into a Communism during the early 1920s. His opposition to Stalin went him to the trial and execution in 1936. Zinoviev was the chief defendant in the “Trial of Sixteen”, which marked the beginning of The Great Purge.

Zinoviev was the alleged author of the Zinoviev’s Letter to British communists, urging revolution, and published just before the 1924 general election, apparently to provoke a right-wing reaction. The letter is widely dismissed as a forgery.

Seriya «Obschedostupnaya finansovaya biblioteka».
[Popular financial library]
34 pp., 8vo, unopened in original printed wrappers, very good condition, wear to edges of spine, back is soiled while printed, stamp of M. Bekus library.

Introduction of taxes in Soviet Russia. Firstly the Soviet Government used only emission and confiscations to finance the budget. Sokolnikov proves the necessity of taxes in this paper.

G. Sokolnikov was fifth Commissar of Finance in Soviet Republic. He signed the Brest-Litovsk treaty in 1918 while replaced Leon Trotsky as chairman. He was one of the authors of the New Economic Policy (NEP).

During the Great Purge Sokolnikov was arrested, tried at the "Trial of the Seventeen" and sentenced to ten years of imprisonment. Reportedly, he was killed in prison by other convicts on May 21, 1939. A post-Stalin investigation revealed that the murder was orchestrated by the NKVD.

All papers of Sokolnikov were strictly banned in USSR until 1989.
