1. A noble fragment: being a leaf of The Gutenberg Bible 1450 - 55

GUTENBERG, Johannes (c. 1398 - 1468)

With a bibliographical essay by A. Edward Newton. New York: Gabriel Wells, 1921. Designed by Bruce Rogers and printed by William Edwin Rudge. Folio, full black blindstamped gilt-lettered morocco by Stikeman & Co. (corners a little rubbed, a few mm loss to foot of spine), gilt dentelles, [6] pp. preliminary text, with an original leaf of the Gutenberg Bible tipped-in. The leaf measures 388 x 287 mm, printed on recto and verso, black gothic lettering of forty-two lines in double columns, rubricated in red, with headlines, chapter numbers, and large initial letters in red and blue, being three two-line initials (two ‘E’s’ and one ‘P’), three Roman numeral verse numbers, and the headline. A very good example with wide margins, some minor foxing, the ink black and crisp. The text is the Vulgate Latin text of Jeremiah Chapters 15 and 16 in their entirety, with the closing ten lines of Chapter 14 and first eight lines of Chapter 17. “Then said the LORD unto me, Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, yet my mind could not be toward this people: cast them out of my sight, and let them go forth.”

A LEAF FROM THE FIRST WESTERN BOOK PRINTED BY MOVABLE TYPE.

“Its printers were competing in the market hitherto supplied by the producers of high-class manuscripts. The design of the book and the layout of the book were therefore based on the book-hand and manuscript design of the day, and a very high standard of press-work was required--and obtained--to enable the new mechanical product to compete successfully with its hand-produced rivals. Standards were set in quality of paper and blackness of ink, in design and professional skill, which the printers of later generations have found difficult to maintain.” (Printing and the Mind of Man). Only forty-eight copies of the Bible are known, most of which are incomplete. The provenance of this leaf is the imperfect Mannheim-Zouch-Sabin copy, divided into leaves and sections by New York bookseller Gabriel Wells nearly a century ago.

The Gutenberg Bible, the first complete book printed in Western culture using the radical technology of movable pieces of type, is perhaps the most famous and important book in the world. Complete examples are now virtually unprocurable in the marketplace, yet a single leaf, extracted from an incomplete copy of the Bible by New York dealer Gabriel Wells in 1921, captivates the imagination when one contemplates the impact this revolution of the Renaissance had on humanity.

2. Two important Tibetan manuscripts: the Prajñāpāramitā and the Expiation of Broken Vows

Two rare and significant Tibetan manuscripts.

(1) Large Prajñāpāramitā (Perfection of Wisdom) Text.

Tibet: unknown maker: sixteenth century.

Measurements: 755 x 210 x 190 mm

The title of the book in English is: The Perfection of Wisdom in One Hundred Thousand Verses.
In Sanskrit it is: Śatasāhasrikā Prajñāpāramitā Sūtra.
In Tibetan it is: Shes rab kyi pha rol tu phyin pa ‘bum.

The text is written in Tibetan and this particular work is the largest of the cycle of literature known as ‘Perfection of Wisdom’. The earliest version of these writings is that in 8,000 verses, and the most abbreviated is the well known ‘Heart Sūtra’. It is said that the ultimately most abbreviated version might be considered to be the letter ‘A’ which is the primeval sound of outgoing breath. The literature known as Perfection of Wisdom was originally written in Sanskrit in India between the 1st century BCE and the 4th century CE.

(2) Smaller book on the Expiation of Broken Vows.

Mongolia: unknown maker: eighteenth century.

Measurements: 330 x 105 x 80 mm.

Four miniatures, complete.

The title of the book in English is: The Fivefold Method of Appeasing Transgressions Against One’s Tantric Vows: The Tantra of All Confessions, known as ‘The Stainless King.’
In Sanskrit it is: Samaya sarva bi ti a nu sarva sa ni tantra vimalaraja nama/

The contents of this text are of prime importance. It is a text inextricably connected with the Tibetan beliefs in the after-death processes which are experienced by the consciousness of the deceased. Its special focus is on the confession of sins and broken vows, both of which hinder the passage of the deceased’s consciousness into a new rebirth.

3. Nouveau voyage autour du monde ; ou l’on decrit en particulier l’isthme de l’Amerique ...

plusieurs cotes & isles des Indes Occidentales, les isles du Cap Ver, le passage par la Terre del Fuego, les Cotes Meridionales du Chili, du Perou, & du Mexique, l’Isle de Guam, Mindanao, & des autres Philippines, les Isles Orientales qui sont pres de Cambodie, de la Chine, Formosa, Lucon, Celebes, &c. la Nouvelle Hollande, les Isles de Sumatra, de Nicobar, de Saint Helene, & le Cap de Bonne-Esperance. Ou l’on traite des differens terroirs de tous ces pays, de leurs ports, des plantes, des fruits, & des animaux qu’on y trouve : de leurs habitants, de leurs coutumes, de leur religion, de leur gouvernement, de leur negoce, &c. Rouen : Jean-Baptiste Machuel le Jeune, 1715. Duodecimo, five volumes, bound in contemporary mottled calf with morocco title labels, spine ornately decorated (joints lightly rubbed), marbled endpapers, engraved title pages to volumes I and II, printed title pages in red and black, early ink annotations to the first blanks of a couple of volumes, ribbon markers, total of 64 engraved maps, charts and views (including the two engraved title pages), many of them folding, engraved initials, headpieces and tailpieces.

A fine set of the first collected edition of Dampier, in the original French binding.

William Dampier (1652 - 1715) remains one of England’s most famous seamen, and was a truly international buccaneer. As a boy he sailed on merchant ships, firstly to Newfoundland and then to Java, later trying his hand at farming in Mexico and the Carribean. By his late twenties he was commanding raids on Spanish ships and settlements in South America, plundering them for loot. In 1686 Dampier set sail across the Pacific to ransack Spanish colonies in the East Indies, and later that year his ship the Cygnet was beached in north-west New Holland, making Dampier the first Englishman to set foot on Australian shores. Dampier made extensive notes of the exotic species he found there, and made the perilous (and ultimately penniless) return voyage via the Cape of Good Hope. His account of this voyage was first published in 1697. Dampier returned to New Holland in 1699 - 1701 in the Roebuck, and again published an account of this dramatic voyage (1703). He was to make further piratical voyages, as well as a third circumnavigation, before dying in London in 1715.

This appealing set is the first collected edition of Dampier’s works, and predates the first English edition by fourteen years. It includes many fine copperplates of Australian fauna and coastlines. Dampier’s contribution to the early study of Australia is significant, and he has been referred to as ‘Australia’s first natural historian’.

4. Voyage autour du monde, par la frégate du roi La Boudeuse, et La Flûte l’Étoile;

BOUGAINVILLE, Louis Antoine de (1729-1811) en 1776, 1767, 1768 & 1769.

Paris : Chez Saillant & Nyon, 1771. Quarto, contemporary full cat’s paw mottled calf with triple fillet, spine in compartments with morocco title label, tooled in gilt, all edges marbled, marbled endpapers, pp. [viii], 417, [3]; eighteenth century owner’s name inscribed on title page, engraved headpieces, tailpieces and initials, 19 copper engraved charts on 20 plates (mostly folding), 3 engraved plates, a fine copy.

FIRST EDITION OF THE FIRST FRENCH CIRCUMNAVAUGHING.

Bougainville’s voyage was of immense importance in terms of the impetus it provided to a renewal of France’s colonial empire following territorial losses suffered to Britain in the Seven Years’ War: it opened up the Pacific for French expansion. Yet what cannot be overstated is the impact Bougainville’s own vivid and romanticised descriptions of the Pacific - specifically Tahiti - had on the French public imagination, her writers, artists and thinkers. The utopian ideal of the noble savage living in an Earthly Paradise owes much to Bougainville’s response to his encounter with the Tahitian culture and landscape. Even though he was not the first European to reach Tahiti - the Englishman Samuel Wallis had done so one year earlier - Bougainville’s account is fundamental to the formation of the European romantic vision of the South Seas.

5. Il selvaggio di Taiti ai francesi con una lettera diretta al filosofo amico dei selvaggi

BRICAIRE DE LA DIXMERIE, Nicolas (1731-1791)

An anonymous Italian translation of Nicolas Bricaire de la Dixmerie’s ‘Le sauvage de Taïti aux Français : avec, Un envoi au philosophe ami des sauvages’, which had been published in the same year. It is one of the earliest known works on Tahiti, its account following immediately on the heels of the 1769 description by Bougainville’s naturalist, de Commerson. The ‘savage’ referred to in the title is none other than Aotourou, the Tahitian man whom Bougainville brought back to Paris and introduced to Parisian society. The work is in epistolary form, being an imaginary letter from Aotourou to the French people in which he paints a picture of ‘Nouvelle Cythere’ as an earthly paradise. Its style echoes the writings of Montesquieu, Monbart and de Graffigny - by viewing the customs and manners of French society through the eyes of an outsider, the writer manages to satirise contemporary French morality.

Jean-Jacques Rousseau is the philosopher referred to in the ‘Letter addressed to the philosopher, friend of the savages’, the second short work in this volume.

It has been suggested that this edition was printed in Venice, not London. (Du Rietz, Rolf. Bibliotheca Polynesiana, 127; Parenti, Marino. Dizionario dei Luoghi di Stampa Falsi, Inventati o Supposti).

6. An Epistle from Oberea, Queen of Otaheite, to John Banks, Esq.

SCOTT-WARING, John (1747-1819)

Dublin: W. Wilson, 1774. Fifth edition. Octavo, modern gilt tooled half calf with marbled boards and gilt morocco label, 17 pp. An attractive, clean copy. A fictional letter satirising an imagined romantic relationship between the Queen of Tahiti and Sir Joseph Banks. Published anonymously, it is now generally accepted to be the work of Scott-Waring, a major in the British East India Company. This Irish edition is a scarce contemporary pirated copy of the original.

‘Twas morn, the gallant vessel steers to land;
On the moist beach the marshall’d sailors stand.
Then first the pangs of conscious love I knew,
My eyes, my longing soul was fixt on you.
To gain thy love I practis’d every art,
And gave my kingdom as I gave my heart.

7. Nouveau voyage a la Mer du Sud.

CROZET, Julien Marie.

Commencé sous les ordres de M. Marion... On a joint à ce voyage un Extrait de celui de M. de Surville dans les mêmes Parages. Paris : Barrois l’aîné, 1783. Octavo, contemporary speckled calf, edges stained red, spine in compartments with floral tooling, gilt-lettered morocco title label, ribbon marker, marbled endpapers, armorial bookplate to front pastedown, pp. viii; 291, 7 engraved plates (one folding). A fine copy.

THE FIRST FRENCH VOYAGES TO AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND.

Marc-Joseph Marion du Fresne (1724 - 1772) was a gifted mariner, notably commanding at the young age of 22 the Prince de Conty which aided the escape of Bonnie Prince Charlie from Scotland in 1746. By the 1760s he was living on the Isle de France (Mauritius). In 1770 a French vessel arrived bringing the islander Aotourou back from Paris with instructions he be returned to his native home of Tahiti, where he had been collected on Bougainville’s circumnavigation in 1768. Dufresne undertook to return Aotourou to the island, largely at his own expense, but the expedition was struck by smallpox and Aotourou died shortly after setting sail. Nonetheless, the expedition continued, and after claiming the Crozet Islands for France, arrived in Van Diemen’s Land in 1772. The sailors made contact with the Aborigines and became the first Europeans to encounter indigenous Australians, as well as the first Frenchmen to set foot on Australian shores. Relations between the parties soured, and after a skirmish the ships sailed to New Zealand, only the second time (after de Surville) the French had reached this part of the world.

8. Dernier Voyage du Capitaine Cook autour du monde

où se trouvent les circonstances de sa mort, publié en allemand par Henri Zimmermann témoin oculaire, & traduit avec un abrégé de la vie de ce navigateur célèbre, & des notes. Berne : Nouvelle Société Typographique, 1783. Octavo, near-contemporary quarter-calf with contrasting morocco title label, lettered in gilt, over marbled papered boards (relined), later endpapers, pp. xi, 200, a water stain in the lower margin below the text, a good copy.

The second French edition of one of the rarest accounts of Cook’s voyages, written from a first-hand perspective by Zimmermann, who sailed on the third voyage.

Heinrich Zimmermann was born near Speyer on the Rhine in 1741 and travelled through Europe looking for work from an early age, living in Geneva, Lyon and Paris before arriving in London in 1776. He worked in various trades during the journey, mainly relating to brass-making (he poured molten metals to craft bells in Paris), but in London worked in a sugar-refining factory, where the raw ingredient was arriving from distant colonies overseas. He learned of plans to search for a north-west passage from Asia to Europe being commanded by the then-famous circumnavigator Cook, and signed on as coxswain. Against explicit British Admiralty orders, he kept a small notebook where he recorded his observations during the voyage, written partly in German shorthand in case he was discovered.

The expedition sailed again to the South Seas, and returned Omai to his home in Tahiti. (Omai had spent two years in England after joining Cook’s second voyage). They visited the islands of Hawaii in 1788, becoming the first Europeans to do so, and then sailed up to the Bering Strait in Alaska in an effort to explore the possibility of a passage to Europe. The voyage returned to Hawaii where Cook met with his untimely death, and under the command of Clerke they sailed back to England. The results of the expedition were a military secret, closely guarded by the English navy officers, and Zimmermann knew that if he published his report it would cause an uproar. In the introduction he explains that while some of the secrets of the expedition do belong rightfully to Great Britain, he was not privy to those, and the details which he affords the reader in his account are simply truthful descriptions of the exotic lands he has visited. It is his duty to fellow seamen that he inform them of what lies on the far side of the world. Furthermore, Zimmermann presents, from a seaman’s perspective, his appreciation of the personal qualities of Cook as a commander and as a man, which provides a valuable comparison with the official account.

9. Natürliche Abbildungen der Saügenden ...

A LATE 18TH - EARLY 19TH CENTURY MANUSCRIPT CONTAINING 234 WATERCOLOUR DEPICTIONS OF MAMMALS OF THE WORLD.

Small quarto (190 x 150 mm), full speckled calf; spine with raised bands and embossed title; later endpapers, 234 watercolours on individual leaves; each work numbered at upper right in red ink (bound in sequence from I – CCLV, thus several have been removed at some stage), some leaves loose. Many of the works are dated at lower right. The series, as stated on the title page, was commenced in 1784, and the latest date inscribed on any of the pages is 1813.

The works appear to have been copied from existing publications of natural history and exploration. Each illustration has a manuscript caption, usually with scientific name. The sequence of categorisation of mammals has been deliberately chosen and the groupings are bound as follows:

Examples of the human race from all known parts of the world – Europe, Africa, the Americas, Asia and the South Seas (including Australian Aborigines and a Maori woman after Parkinson), inhabitants of the New Hebrides and Tahiti (with a portrait of Omai), “extraordinary humans” such as albinos, giants, and the London Stachelschweinmensch (Porcupine Man); anthropological studies of skulls of different races; examples of other primates; lemurs; bats (including flying fox); sloths; anteaters (including echidna after Shaw & Nodder); armadillos; rhinoceri; elephants; seals; manatee; canines (domesticated and wild, including the Australian dingo); felines (domesticated and wild).

The watercolours are in a fine state of preservation, uniformly clean and with vibrant colour, executed recto only.

The manuscript was created by an obviously gifted amateur artist in Stralsund, a mediaeval trading port on the Baltic Sea, in the region formerly known as Pomerania. Although it has always had a German-speaking population and strong German civic and economic influence, Stralsund was actually under Swedish control from 1715-1807, when it was taken by Napoleon’s army. After the Congress of Vienna in 1815 it formally became part of Prussian Pomerania.

This unique and extensive archive of watercolours is in a sense a wunderkammer of exotic specimens of natural history. Eighteenth century artworks depicting Australian Aborigines, whether copies or not, are very rarely offered for sale.

11. Atala, ou Les amours de deux sauvages dans le désert

CHATEAUBRIAND, François-Auguste-René vicomte de, 1768-1848.

Paris : Chez Migneret, An IX (1801). Troisieme edition, revue et corrigée. Duodecimo, in original printer’s plain paper wrappers (pristine), 207 pp (crisp and clean). Five editions of this landmark literary work, which had a major influence on the early Romantic movement, appeared within a year of its first publication (April 2 1801). The novel drew inspiration from Chateaubriand’s experiences as a traveller in North America. Its central characters are a French missionary (Father Aubry), a half-cast Christian woman (Atala) and a Natchez Indian (Chactas). In spite of the fact that Atala and Chactas display some of the same virtues as the missionaries, Chateaubriand subtly attacks the Enlightenment ideal of the Noble Savage by depicting the other Native American characters as barbarous and hostile.

15. Manuscript letter signed by Jacques Arago

ARAGO, Jacques Étienne Victor (1790 - 1855)

Single sheet (250 x 270 mm), folded vertically, the blindstamped initials ‘J.A.’ impressed into the paper, with a short message written in ink in the hand of Arago’s secretary (Arago had lost his sight in 1837), signed in pencil in the frail hand of the aged Arago himself and dated 9 October 1853. The letter is addressed to ‘The editorship of the Press’ (publication unknown), thanking them on behalf of his family for their condolences on the death of his brother, the mathematician, astronomer and politician François Arago.

Jacques Arago sailed with Freycinet on his 1817 voyage in the Uranie, and later wrote and illustrated the chronicle of the expedition in Voyage autour du monde (1823). Original correspondence from this important figure is scarce.

BUNCE, Daniel

Language of the Aborigines of the Colony of Victoria, and other Australian districts; with parallel translations and familiar specimens in Dialogue, as a guide to Aboriginal Protectors and others engaged in ameliorating their condition. Geelong: Thomas Brown, 1859.

Stated second edition (actually third). Duodecimo, flush cut papered cards, cloth spine, bookplate to front pastedown, 60pp., fine. Ferguson 7665.

In the 1840s Bunce made an intensive study of the Aboriginal languages of Victoria, and in 1846 travelled on Leichhardt’s second expedition, a section in the book being devoted to language of the tribes of the Darling Downs. In his Direction in pronunciation, Bunce advises: ‘By speaking this language with a soft Italian accent, the reader will have little trouble in making himself understood by the natives’.

SMILES, Samuel

across North America. London : John Murray, 1871. Octavo, full calf, front with gilt embossed crest of Cheltenham Juvenile Proprietary School (Gloucestershire), spine with raised bands, black leather title label and gilt lettering, marbled endpapers and edges, prize inscription for F.A. Bligh (IV Class Examination, 1873), 304 pp, illustrated. A lovely copy. Ferguson lists only a later imprint.

The Scottish writer and reformer Samuel Smiles (1812-1904) edited this account of his own adolescent son’s voyage to Australia and North America in 1869-71. (Samuel junior had contracted a lung disease and was sent on a long sea voyage by his father). The narrative is based on young Samuel’s letters home as well as his meticulously kept journal, and is probably the earliest known written account by a non-adult of a visit to Australia.

ROBLEY, Major-General

London : Chapman & Hall, 1896. Quarto, gilt-lettered brown cloth with moko decoration, faint shelf-number to spine, minor rubbing at edges and short splits to head and foot of spine, photographic frontispiece, 180 illustrations and photographs, Tate Central Library bookplate on front pastedown and stamp on verso of title-page, a very good copy with many pages yet unopened. Horatio Gordon Robley (1840-1930) was a soldier, artist, and collector. He arrived in New Zealand in 1863 and while stationed in the country drew an unprecedented number of sketches of Maori life. Moko or Maori Tattooing is his magnum opus. His acknowledged objective was to put together a text to support the specialised record he had drawn of tattoo patterns. Robley also had a significant personal collection of mokomokai, or preserved Maori heads with moko design. When he returned to England in 1908 he offered to sell his collection of heads to the government of New Zealand: they declined, and the collection eventually went to the American Museum of Natural History. In 1998 these human remains were repatriated to New Zealand. Very rare, a fine copy of this important early work.

25. Portrait of E.M. Blyton, c 1920

Unknown artist

Charcoal on thick paper, 480 x 310 mm (mild foxing, two small perforations at top edge, contemporary with the work’s date of origin, the materials well preserved and stable), laid down on white card, the subject identified as E.M. Blyton at lower right in charcoal by the artist (this is not Blyton’s signature and hence not a self-portrait).

This accomplished and startlingly candid portrait of Enid Blyton (1897-1968), one of the twentieth century’s best-loved children’s writers, was probably executed around 1920, prior to the publication of her first book of poetry, Child Whispers (1922) and to her marriage to the editor Hugh Alexander Pollock in 1924. Intimate and drawn from life, it shows a troubled-looking young woman obviously enduring deep sadness. Her melancholy mien suggests the work perhaps dates from the period shortly after the death of her father (1920). Blyton could not face attending his funeral, and the repressed emotions stemming from this failure to grieve publicly must have affected her privately. Indeed, since the author’s death, pejorative statements about her unstable character have been made, in particular by her daughter Imogen: ‘The truth is Enid Blyton was arrogant, insecure, pretentious, very skilled at putting difficult or unpleasant things out of her mind, and without a trace of maternal instinct. As a child, I viewed her as a rather strict authority. As an adult I pitied her.’ (quoted in Gyles Brandreth, “Unhappy Families”. The Age, Melbourne, 31 March 2002).

[France, c 1890]. Oblong box of very thick board (345 x 258 x 45 mm), the lid with a superb, colourful paste-down illustration depicting children and families at the zoo, with camel and elephant rides and an ostrich-drawn carriage. The box contains four chromolithographic scenes pasted onto wood and cut into jigsaw puzzles; each puzzle is complete (sixteen large pieces). The scenes are: an outdoor Punch and Judy show (probably in the Tuileries gardens); a picnic for children in the countryside; a village festival with children playing musical instruments in a procession; a fair with merry-go-round and other attractions.

A true marvel both for its perfect condition and exquisite design.

31. Typed letter signed by Kipling, discussing illustrations in the Just-So Stories.

[KIPLING, Rudyard]

Single, folded octavo sheet on letterhead with Kipling’s Bateman’s Burwash, Sussex, address (very clean and bright), typescript, and signed in ink by Rudyard Kipling, dated 20 November 1924, with original envelope and addressed to D. Avery Esq., London. ‘Dear Sir, I am much obliged to you for your interesting account of your discoveries in the illustrations of my “Just-So Stories”; as I am struck with the zeal with which you followed your clues. As to the letters on the collar round King Solomon’s neck, any friend of yours who happens to be a Freemason will tell you what they mean. Wishing you success in your further searches, Believe me, Very Sincerely yours, Rudyard Kipling. P.S. I do not recall that there was any special significance in the rocks etc. above the cave in the illustration to “The Cat that Walked”. There you have the advantage of me.’; [together with] a handwritten draft of a letter of reply from D. Avery to Kipling, dated 25 November 1924, addressed to Kipling’s Bateman’s Burwash address: ‘Dear Sir, Please accept my thanks for your kind letter. I am enclosing a rough tracing taken from the illustration of the “Cat that Walked” to indicate the outlines that suggested to me grotesque monsters devouring female figures - the waistband, skirt & foot indicating the one, and the back, part of upper of arm, waistline & part of skirt indicating the other figure. I thought you might be interested in seeing the foundation on which my imagination had built. Again thanking you for your Kindness, Believe me, Yours sincerely...’

32. Winnie-the-Pooh [with prospectus]

MILNE, A. A.

London: Methuen, 1926. First edition. Decorations by E. H. Shepard. Octavo, gilt-illustrated green cloth in illustrated dustjacket (very small nicks to head and foot of spine, minor rubbing to corners, an excellent example), top edge gilt, very small loss on front free endpaper where glue from front pastedown has adhered, usual browning on endpapers from dustjacket, neat owner’s name on p [i], 159 pp. A fine copy of the true first edition, accompanied by the original printed prospectus of 4 pp., with Shepard illustrations, advertising the availability of the three editions of 1926, specimen pages, and a list of books by the author available from Methuen.

Pooh made his first appearance in book form in Milne’s When we were very young (1924), which features a poem about the bear which had been earlier printed in February in Punch. Pooh returned in a Christmas story commission for The Evening News in 1925, and in October 1926 was to star in his own volume of stories, simply titled Winnie-the-Pooh. Of all the friends of Christopher Robin, Pooh would prove favourite, and his stories have been in print since this first edition.

A fine copy with the rare prospectus.

The Cowling collection of J. R. R. Tolkien including The Lord of the Rings inscribed in Elvish

TOLKIEN, J. R. R.

The following collection of Tolkien’s books, manuscripts and family correspondence comes from the estate of G. H. Cowling (1881 – 1946), former Chair of English at the University of Melbourne, and his wife Muriel (Mollie) Cowling. Tolkien was introduced to Cowling at the University of Leeds, where they both taught English Literature in the 1920s.

Tolkien was appointed Professor of Anglo-Saxon at Oxford in 1925, and Cowling took up Chair of English at the University of Melbourne in 1928. Although far apart, a close friendship between the men and their families would continue over the years. Tolkien presented to Cowling signed copies of his philological studies on Chaucer, carefully hand-correcting any small errors as he knew his friend would immediately recognise these. These early elements of the collection present an insight into Tolkien’s dedication to and masterful command of the English language, honed by an academic training without which he could not have constructed the Middle Earth saga.

The key item in this collection is of course the fine first edition of The Lord of the Rings, presented by Tolkien to Cowling’s widow when she stayed with the Tolkiens in 1955. Tolkien has signed each volume, with a meaningful inscription in Elvish on the endpaper of Fellowship, a personal touch afforded to only his closest friends. Tolkien is again modest in his own description of the masterpiece, and in a letter affixed to the inside cover he writes that ‘it is the only means in which I can express myself’. The condition of these marvellous first editions is very good indeed, some minor chipping to the spines but otherwise in attractive complete dustjackets and, like the whole collection, entirely unrestored. The dual inscriptions in Fellowship and signatures on remaining volumes transform this set of otherwise acceptably good firsts, into a presentation set of major importance.

A series of intimate letters exchanged between Mrs Tolkien and Mrs Cowling further flesh out the life of the great author, as well as the lives of the Tolkien clan. This collection is unique in that it affords us precious glimpses into both Tolkien’s personal life and his career as a writer, a rare combination. Copies of The Lord of the Rings - without doubt one of the great literary works of the twentieth century - very seldom appear for sale inscribed in the language Tolkien invented. This runic script, crafted by hand, ignites the imagination in a way no earthly language can.

This remarkable group, with its impeccable provenance, is offered as the Cowling Family collection, and represents a unique opportunity to acquire valuable original materials from the hand of one of the most influential storytellers in history.

A full bibliographical description of the collection is available on our website.

35. Young African child

WITTENBERG-MILLER, Shulamith

Oil on canvas, 230 x 160 mm, signed and dated lower edge ‘S.W. Miller 1960’. Shulamith Wittenberg was born in 1900 in Jerusalem, Palestine. She exhibited at the first Tower of David Exhibition in Jerusalem, in 1921, an event now considered to have played a highly influential role in the shaping of Jewish cultural identity in pre-Israel Palestine. She undertook advanced studies in Paris with the Cubist painter André Lhote. In 1933 she married Rabbi Meir Miller and moved to the U.S.A. From 1950-70 she lived in South Africa, continuing to paint and exhibit. This poignant and accomplished portrait of a young African child dates from the middle of her South African period. Among other institutions, her work is represented in the collection of the Brooklyn Museum.

37. Bermuda: an album of important photographs dating to 1868

GREEN, Arthur (1832-1873)

Photograph album (255 x 210mm), tooled full calf (rubbed), approximately 60 leaves (all edges gilt), containing twenty-three albumen print photographs of Bermuda (most 100 x 175 mm, two in larger panorama format with 305 mm diameter), dating from a visit to the island in 1868, the front free endpaper with a contemporary manuscript index of images, the photographer’s name Arthur Green inscribed beneath in his own hand; the photographs are mounted recto of leaves only, with individual manuscript captions beneath; the album also contains eighteen larger format photographs (one loose) of Guernsey in the Channel Islands, dating to around 1870 (possibly also attributable to Green). The albumen prints are in excellent condition with generally good to excellent tonal range; the album leaves with a tiny amount of scattered spotting (in particular on the index page), but overall the album is in extremely clean and fresh condition.

Arthur Green was one of the most significant early photographers in southern Africa. Born in Nova Scotia, he settled in Cape Colony in the late 1840s. By 1857 he was operating his own photographic studio in Grahamstown, and in the early 1860s was active in Cape Town. It was in this period that Green took his most celebrated series of photographs, during the visit of the Confederate battleship CSS Alabama to Table Bay, Cape Town, in August 1863. Green’s photographs were the only ones ever taken on board the ship, of which precious few images exist. In 1864 Green was forced to close his business due to insolvency, and sold his equipment. He left for New York in 1866 to work as a photographic assistant. (University of Cambridge Library; Liverpool Museum). This group of photographs taken by Arthur Green in Bermuda in 1868 is a homogeneous group documenting a single visit to the island, and it would appear that they are Green’s own private photographs. In addition to its two notable early panoramic views, the group contains portraits of important identified subjects, among them the Governor of Bermuda and members of the social elite, and maritime views, including an image of the launch of a Gosling Brothers rum boat. The index titles include: Flatt’s Bridge; Boat building, Hamilton Harbor; Rocks, Hungry Bay; Suburbs, Hamilton; Residence of Dep. Com. General Goldie; St Georges, from Convict Bay; Hamilton from the east; Rocks, Tucker’s Town points; Wayside sketches, Hamilton Harbor; Public Offices, Hamilton; Government House, Mount Langton, Sir Frederic & Lady Chapman; St Georges, from Barrack Hill; Wayside sketches, Mullet Bay; St Georges from Commandant’s Quarters (panorama); The Dockyard; Royal Artillery Encampment, Castle Island (panorama); Commissariat Officers, Bermuda 1868; Castle Island; Launch of Gosling’s Boat; Flatt’s village; Mt Langton, Lady Chapman, Sir Frederic Chapman, Miss Cox, The Misses Mundy, Lieut. Edwards.

An apparently unique early photographic record of Bermuda by a photographer of historical importance.
