320. PRICHARD, J. C. An Analysis of Egyptian Mythology: To which is subjoined, a Critical Examination of the Remains of Egyptian Chronology. By J. C. Prichard, M.D. London: Printed for John and Arthur Arch, 1819 Nineteenth century quarter calf with paper covered boards, Roy.8vo. ii,xviii,427,ii,138pp. hand-coloured frontispiece and 5 plates.
Prichard, James Cowles (1786-1848), physician and ethnologist was one of the important figures in the history of anthropology. Prichard's main ethnological aim was to prove the unity of mankind and to vindicate the veracity of the anthropology laid down in Genesis. He perceived that traditional accounts of difference in skin colour were flawed, and eighteenth-century environmentalism was empirically false. In 1819 he found time to publish 'An Analysis of Egyptian Mythology,' in which he traced the early connection between the Hindus and the Egyptians, and made public his hieroglyphic alphabet. Champollion's 'Précis' of the latter was not published till 1824. In this he also asserts that the myths of all human cultures were so similar that they all necessarily had to share the same primeval history. Many of his carefully worked-out theories were controversial at the time but gradually became generally accepted. New end-papers, late nineteenth century quarter calf with raised bands and black leather label, old embossed library stamp to the title page, slight offsetting of frontispiece to title, a very nice copy with the edges uncut. Johann Michael Wansleben (1635 - 1679) was a German orientalist who had been a disciple of Hiob Ludolf. In 1663 Ludolf's patron the Duke Ernst I of Saxe-Coburg funded a scientific expedition to Ethiopia under Wansleben who however never reached Ethiopia. In 1671 in the service of Jean-Baptiste Colbert, Vansleb made a second attempt to reach Ethiopia, and again went no further than Egypt. However he travelled extensively in Upper Egypt producing one of the earliest accounts of the land, the people, in particular the Copts, and the ancient monuments. He managed to collect many important Coptic, Arabic and Ethiopian manuscripts which are now in Paris. Head and tail of spine rubbed, joints slightly thin, a very nice copy in a contemporary calf with a richly gilt spine and a gilt Greek key design to the upper and lower boards. [Blackmer: 1767; Gay: 2278; Hilmy: 318] £ 1,250.00

411. YOUNG, Thomas. Rudiments of an Egyptian dictionary in the ancient enchorial character; containing all the words of which the sense has been ascertained. By Thomas Young, M.D., F.R.S. To which are prefixed a memoir of the author, and a catalogue of his works and essays. London: J. & A. Arch, 1831 Contemporary boards with later cloth spine, 8vo. 62, x, 24, [4], 110, xv pp. portrait frontispiece of the author, index. Young, Thomas (1773-1829), was a physician, physicist, and Egyptologist. He competed with Champollion and Akerblad over the decyphering of the Rosetta stone. At the time of his death he was completing his 'Rudiments of an Egyptian dictionary in the ancient enchorial character' which subsequently appeared as an appendix to Henry Tattam's A Compendious Grammar of the Egyptian Language (1830). Young's contributions to the study of ancient Egyptian languages have sometimes been compared unfavourably with those of Jean François Champollion. Although his interventions were perhaps less intense than Champollion's he made a number of original and insightful innovations, especially in the mid-1810s. The portrait frontispiece is by Charles Turner after Sir Thomas Lawrence. Title page creased and remounted on the inner margin, frontispiece slightly foxed, a very nice copy in the original boards with a later matching light brown cloth spine with a printed paper label. £ 900.00
