2. The Eglinton Tournament. Friday August 30th 1839.
Published by Hodgson & Graves, Print-Sellers to the Queen, Pall Mall, 1840.
Folio, original cloth gilt; pp. iv, tinted lithographic titlepage and eight plates, as called for. Covers and front endpaper detached & worn; plates spotted. £500
An account of a re-enactment of a medieval tournament staged by Archibald William Montgomerie, the 13th Earl of Eglinton, for his family and friends at his estate in Ayrshire. The 4,000 expected visitors turned into 100,000 from all over the British Isles but, because tickets were free, Eglinton had to spend much of the wealth of his estate on the three-day event.

6. [Writing and Drawing Made Easy, Amusing and Instructive. Containing The Whole Alphabet in all the characters now us’d, Both in Printing and Pennmanship; Each illustrated by Emblematic Devices and Moral Copies, Calculated for the Use of Schools and Curiously Engrav’d by the Best Hands.]
   [Printed for and Sold by T. Bellamy, Bookseller at Kingston upon Thames; as also by most of the Book-sellers and Print-sellers in Town and Country.] [n.d., c.1750.]
   A rare school book; oblong 8vo, 175 x 215mm (7 x 8¾"), rebound in limp wrappers, late 18th century calf gilt strips laid on; 46 engraved plates. Lacking two engraved titles and two plates (or six) and 4pp. text. Plates worn and stained, rear plates with burns in margins, first plate laid on front pastedown, some old mss. £690
   A well-used school book, which has obviously suffered at the hands of several pupils. It consisted of two plates for each letter of the alphabet, one illustrated and one of engraved text; this example lacks the illustration of 'The Dog' and the text for 'The Zealot' and possibly both plates for 'I' and 'U', although these were also lacking in the only example we could compare (archive.org).

9. [Landscape with Trees, Girls Crossing Footbridge.]
   W Havell. [1807]
   Rare pen lithograph. Sheet 320 x 230mm (12½ x 9"). Trimmed to image as normal, tipped on album sheet. Staining bottom right. £280
   An early pen lithograph first published in the second issue of 'Specimens of Polyautography' issued in 1807. The first part of 'Specimens' (1803) was the first set of artist's lithographs ever published, showcasing the new medium which allowed artists to make prints arguably resembling drawings more than any earlier technique. Unlike most printmaking techniques, lithography required no special training as artists could work directly onto the plate and leave specialist printers to actually make the prints. For this reason many artists who were not trained printmakers (such as Géricault and Delacroix) often worked in lithography. By William Havell (1782-1857), landscape painter. This print was made in the year that the young artist moved from Reading to London, quickly establishing a reputation for his acute observation of nature. Havell later spent ten years living in China and India (1816-26), drawing many of his later subjects from these experiences. Ex Collection Hon Christopher Lennox-Boyd. Stock: 53523

At this grave moment in the struggle between my people and a highly organised enemy who has transgressed the Laws of Nations and changed the ordinance that binds civilized Europe together, I appeal to you. I rejoice in my Empire’s effort, and I feel pride in the voluntary response from my Subjects all over the world who have sacrificed home, fortune, and life itself, in order that another may not inherit the free Empire which their ancestors and mine have built. I ask you to make good these sacrifices. The end is not in sight. More men and yet more are wanted to keep my Armies in the Field, and through them to secure Victory and enduring Peace. In ancient days the darkest moment has ever produced in our race the sternest resolve. I ask you, men of all classes, to come forward voluntarily and take your share in the fight. In freely responding to my appeal, you will be

36. The Centurion Cornelius. From an Original Picture brought to this Country by M Bryan Esq. And when the Angel which spake unto Cornelius was departed he called two of his household servants and a devout soldier of them that waited on him continually And when he had declared all these things unto them he sent thme to Joppa. Acts. Chap.r X Verse 7 & 8.

A large mezzotint. 585 x 660mm (23 x 26"). Thread margins, 2 tears through inscription area and top edge. £450

Cornelius, following a vision of an angel, summons ‘two of his household servants, and a devout soldier’ in order to send them to Joppa to fetch the apostle Peter (Acts X: 1-8). The painting has also been seen as showing the parable of the Unmerciful Servant, in which a servant is forgiven for his debts by a king, but fails to show the same leniency to a fellow servant. The painting (London, Wallace Collection) is no longer believed to be by Rembrandt, although its authorship is disputed. Frankau: 22, ii of ii.

C. le Brun Pinxit, G. Edelinck Sculpsit. [n.d, 1675.]

Rare engraving. On two sheets, 640 x 420 (25¼ x 16½") & 640 x 520mm (25¼ x 20½"). Trimmed at bottom, losing dedication, title and publisher’s address. £480

Sisygambis, mother of Darius III, prostrates herself before Hephaestion, mistaking him for Alexander. Instead of flying into a rage, Alexander dismisses this error as of no importance and puts the family under his protection.
Prints of this size were unusual during this period, due to expense. This engraving of a painting belonging to Louis XIV was published as a propaganda piece, lauding the magnificence of royalty. Gérard Edelinck, the engraver, has also chosen to make dividing line jagged, so the join would disappear in the darkest parts of the image.
The original oil, painted c.1660, is still at Versailles.

42. The Exposition of Cyrus. This Print, engrav'd from the Original Picture, painted by Benedetto Castiglione, in the Collection of the Right Honourable the Earl of Lincoln; is, with the deepest Sense of Gratitude, most humbly dedicated to the Subscribers and Encouragers of this Undertaking _ By their much obliged & most obedient humble Servant, John Boydell._

Fine engraving. 430 x 540mm (17 x 21¾”), with large margins. £320

A shepherd and his wife finding the infant Cyrus being suckled by a dog. Cyrus's grandfather, alarmed by a prophecy that his grandson would dethrone him, gave orders to cast the baby into the wilderness. Rescued by a shepherd and his wife, Cyrus returns to fulfil the prophecy in 559 BC, becoming king of Persia and creating the first Persian Empire. Ex: Duke of Westminster.

Fine engraving. 430 x 540mm (17 x 21¾”), with large margins. £320

A shepherd and his wife finding the infant Cyrus being suckled by a dog. Cyrus's grandfather, alarmed by a prophecy that his grandson would dethrone him, gave orders to cast the baby into the wilderness. Rescued by a shepherd and his wife, Cyrus returns to fulfil the prophecy in 559 BC, becoming king of Persia and creating the first Persian Empire.

This plate was engraved from a painting in the collection of Robert Walpole at Houghton in Norfolk and subsequently sold to Catherine the Great of Russia. It is now residing in the Hermitage, as ‘Childhood of King Cyrus’, attributed to Antonio Maria Vassallo rather than Giovanni Benedetto Castiglione. Ex Collection Duke of Westminster.

Nicholas Haddock (1686-1746), Royal Naval admiral and a Member of Parliament. He first distinguished himself at the age of 16 as a midshipman at the Battle of Vigo in 1702. Promoted to lieutenant, he served at the relief of Barcelona in 1706, and at the Battle of Cape Passaro in 1718, he was Captain of the 70-gun Grafton, and led the attack. In 1732 he was appointed to command of The Nore. He was Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean from 1738 to 1742, where he successfully blockaded the Spanish coast and took valuable prizes including two treasure ships, but failed to force the Spanish fleet into an action. He was promoted to Vice Admiral in 1741 and to Admiral in 1744. Haddock served as MP for Rochester, an Admiralty borough whose seats were almost invariably filled by distinguished naval officers, from 1734 until his death. C.S. 172 I of II. Parker: 388. [n.d., c.1770.]
An extremely rare mezzotint, an early working proof. Sheet 325 x 210mm (12¼ x 8¼”) Trimmed into image on right. £490
A fine & unique proof portrait of a British naval commander stationed in North America in the build up to the American War of Independence. Captain James Hawker (1730-86) commanded the 'Sardoine' slop, patrolling the Eastern Seaboard to prevent smuggling. On several occasions he needed his contingent of marines to protect his ship from the colonists. On 30 January 1766, at the height of the Stamp Act crisis, he had the chief magistrate of Wilmington, Delaware, warn a mob that anyone approaching his ship would be fired on by the marines. In Charleston the following year, a party from 'Sardoine' boarded a suspected smuggling schooner and the populace threatened to use the batteries of Fort Johnson against the 'Sardoine'. Hawker captained the frigate 'Mermaid' in the War of Independence before retiring in 1781. One of his three sons, Edward, became an admiral; three of his five daughters married admirals. Sir Walter Raleigh [1554? - 1618], explorer, published in the ‘Heads of Illustrious Persons of Great Britain’. He sponsored one of the first English attempts to colonise North America, the ill-fated Roanoke colony, and led two expeditions to discover El Dorado, the City of Gold, in South America. Raleigh was also ‘a soldier in Ireland; a sailor […] celebrant of colonialism (in his ‘Discoverie of the Large, Rich and Bewtiful Empire of Guiana’ of 1596); a poet; a dancer; a royal favourite who brilliantly mastered the Elizabethan court rhetoric of chaste love only to plummet into disfavour after a marriage the Queen didn't like; an enthusiastic brawler who laughed throughout the Earl of Essex's execution; and atheist; and an associate of what Nicholas Popper calls "poet-ruffians". He was also [...] a prisoner, condemned to the Tower of London for his part in a plot to promote Arabella Stuart to the throne.' (Adam Smyth, 'Wrong Rivers' in TLS June 14 2013). Ver Huell 13. 214. Sir Hugh Myddelton Knight & Baronet. The famous Aqueduct call’d the New River was performed at his Charge...
Engraving. 375 x 280mm (14⅞ x 11¼”). Small margins. £180
Sir Hugh Myddelton (1560-1631), goldsmith and entrepreneur, after Cornelius Jonson or Janssen. Early in the seventeenth century Myddelton became involved in the successful project to bring a supply of water to London, which was still the most important source of piped water into the metropolis two hundred years later. In 1605 an act of parliament was obtained to bring water from springs near Hertford to north London (a distance of nearly forty miles), as surveyed by the mathematician Edward Wright (1561-1615, famed for his correction of Mercator’s Projection). Myddelton’s involvement is not recorded until 1609, when he took the lead in the project which was completed in 1613. The establishment of the New River was Myddelton’s main claim to fame, and he was involved with the running of the company for the rest of his life, although he was also involved in mining and land draining projects. Etching. 190 x 265mm (7½ x 10¼”). Bit messy, creasing & some marks. Sheet has been trimmed to plate. £140
Political satire: scene in a barber’s shop, at centre John Bull being shaved by the Earl of Bute, who is assisted (right) by the Duc de Nivernois (1716 - 1798), French Ambassador to Britain for the conclusion of the peace 1762-63. The Duc, here halfway through dressing a wig on a stand, stands opposite a second assistant with his own wig, obviously a Scotsman.
The familiar chief target is Prime Minister John Stuart, 3rd Earl of Bute (1713 - 1792), unpopular as a Scot and for his influence on the young George III. Pitt and the majority of public opinion opposed his concessions to France during the peace negotiations of 1762. Bute was blamed for making peace with France in 1763 at the expense of Prussia and was forced to resign, but continued to retain the King's confidence despite criticism of his role in public affairs.

Engraved by Percy Roberts. London. Published by Sherwood & Co. 1827.

Aquatint. 220 x 135mm (8¾ x 5¼"). £180

George Pocock (1774-1843) was an English schoolteacher and inventor of the 'Charvolant', a kite-drawn carriage. In 1826, he patented the design of his 'Charvolant' buggy, which used two kites on a single line to provide enough power to draw along a buggy carrying several passengers at considerable speed. This scene depicts five figures in the buggy, travelling along a road in the centre. The two well dressed figures at the back wave to onlookers on both sides. The Aeropleustic Art, or Navigation in the Air, by the Use of Kites, or Buoyant Sails.

295. [I. - Santa Maria della Salute.] Wilfred Huggins [signed inside plate in pencil.] W.H [MDCCXXIII.] W.R. Howell & Co. Etching, in original mount attached to top of margins at corners. Sheet 360 x 460mm (14 x 18¼), with wide margins. Glued to a mount. £170

Here is seen one of the few open spaces on the Grand Canal, used and enjoyed by the general public. The Church of Santa Maria della Salute, whose façade is shown, is bold and imposing in appearance and in situation. It is endeared to the Venetians, having been erected in 1630 to commemorate prayers offered and answered for the rescue of the city from a devastating plague. So prominent a feature in the architectural aspect of the canal be ignored, and in the common experience, ends by being loved. The square fronting the Church, for many hours during the day shows dramatic variations in sunlight and shadow.

296. Zumalacarregui. Vainqueur de Sarsfield, Sola, Guesada, Rodel, Mina & Valdes [facsimile signature].

Rare lithograph on india paper. 200 x 150mm (8 x 6¼), with wide margins. Some surface dirt. Some small tears in margins. £90

Tomas de Zumalacárregui [1788 - 1835]. Spanish Carlist general. A professional soldier, he fought against the French in the Peninsular War (1808-14) and supported the absolutist cause during the disturbances of 1820-23. When King Ferdinand VII died (1833), Zumalacárregui supported the claim of Ferdinand's brother Don Carlos to the throne. He was undefeated until his death in the siege of Bilbao in 1835.

Tinted lithograph. Printed area 175 x 230mm (7 x 9"). Narrow margins top and right. £190
One of eleven views from the rare book 'Views in the Island of Dominica' which were, according to Abbey, probably published for private circulation.
First Lieutenant, Whitworth Porter (1827-92) was in Dominica from 1847-50 with his wife Anne. He later served in the trenches of Sebastopol during the Crimean War (publishing a book about his experiences), where he was promoted to brevet-major, then Captain in 1859. He was appointed commanding Royal Engineer at Barbados in 1874, then commanding Royal Engineer of the western district, stationed at Plymouth, 1877. He retired with the honorary rank of major-general in 1881. Major interest to Malta collectors. He wrote "A History of the Knights of Malta" and was connected to the "Order of St. John & Jerusalem". Abbey Travel: 695.

Head and shoulders portraits of Dost Mohammed Khan, his two sons Muhammad Akram Khan and Haider Khan, and his cousin Abd al-Ghani Khan, from Emily Eden's 'Portraits of the Princes & Peoples of India'.
Dost Mohammed Khan had been Emir of Afghanistan until he was deposed by the British in 1839 at the beginning of the First Afghan War and exiled to Mussoorie. He returned to the throne after the disastrous conclusion to the war for the British.
The Hon. Emily Eden, the seventh daughter of William Eden, first baron Auckland, accompanied her brother, George, Lord Auckland (1784-1849) to India, where he served as Governor-General from 1835-1842. A highly gifted amateur artist and writer, Eden recorded her observations of life in India during this period in the form of letters and an extensive collection of sketches, meeting people like Dost Mohammed using her brother’s influence. On her return to England in 1842, Eden arranged to have her images printed privately as a portfolio of 24 lithographs.
