Later red full morocco binding signed CAPÉ. Spine with raised bands encased with blind tooled fillets. Blind tooled fillet frame on boards. Double gilt fillet on board edges. Wide interior gilt frieze. All edges gilt.

FIRST EDITION of this famous treatise in which Bossuet emphatically condemns the theatre. During the XVIIIth century, a lengthy controversy developed concerning the morality of the theatre, which can be resumed by the question posed by the Théatin brother, Caffaro, in his foreword to Edme Bour-sault’s comedies (1638-1701): “can we permit comedy, or must it be absolutely forbidden?”. Jacques-Bénigne Bossuet (1627-1704) was the Bishop of Meaux, advisor to Louis XIV, and had been tutor to the Dauphin until 1680. He took a vigorous part in the quarrel and published this treaty, in which he condemns outright comedy and actors alike, including Racine and Cor- nelle’s tragedies and Le Cid.

One saw groups of bodies, wretched like piles of old rags; bomb holes filled to the brim just like garbage cans; vessels full of nameless things – juice, meat, clothes and dung. Other Sisters living in Nantes asked for the parrot, who was entrusted to a Loire mariner to make the journey from Nevers to Nantes. On the boat, the parrot naturally picked up the boatsman's language and that of loose women. When the parrot arrived at his destination, he swore like a boatsman! The Nantes Sisters were of course appalled and sent him straight back to Nevers, where it was most difficult to teach him latin again.

The only collection of Rimbaud’s poetry published at the author’s expense.
Of the estimated 450 copies of the edition, 425 remained with the publisher Poot as Rimbaud didn’t have the funds to pay for them. Found by chance by a Belgian bibliophile at the beginning of the XXth century, these miraculous copies didn’t reduce the value of the book, as interest in it increased with the number of copies available. In half-leather slipcase and chemise. Some of the sheets are a little yellowed, a few creases, otherwise in very good condition.

These drawings, most of which bear the monogram F.H. Most of the models are accompanied by an additional lead pencil sketch showing the back of the garment or an important detail, and an accurate hand-written description. Two of the drawings are also complete with samples of fabric. The Season, and the name of the workshop head, probably responsible for the styles, are mentioned on each part.

Remarkable collection of afternoon dresses, blouses, evening coats and peignoirs, with high or dropped waistlines, oriental motifs and shorter skirts, typical of the Roaring Twenties.

66. BESNARD-FORTIN, Jeanne

A total of 223 plates, 39 watercolours and an impressive total of 1,133 drawings.

This book is presented in two specially made filing binders; each sheet of drawing or text is protected by a plastic film.

A UNIQUE AND REMARKABLE work whose conception required several years of work from Jeanne Besnard-Fortin, who is a historian as well as a figurative painter.

Jeanne Besnard-Fortin explains her objective to us: “For me, it is only a question of guiding the reader through the images, of placing him through anecdotes in the atmosphere of fashion worn at different times, in a word, with its ‘climate’.

Given the abundance of illustrations, I didn’t think I should get lost in long and tedious descriptions. I limited myself to giving some details about the shapes of the hats, the fabrics used and the particular colours of each period. However, in order to broaden the scope of this study, I have described some hairstyles that will be easy to reconstruct, but which, in most cases, do not appear on the plates, the typical hairstyle, the one that avoids confusion being generally represented on them.

Moreover, the head being the support of the hat, I also gave some models of these hair styles which were always designed to adapt to the fashion of the headgear, and finally, provide in the text, details on make-up, perfumes, and give, at the same time, beauty recipes used by some of our most famous predecessors.”

An unpublished history of the French Coiffure, from the Gauls to the Third Republic with more than 1,000 original drawings.

The Gazette du Bon Ton was launched in 1912 under the direction of Lucien Vogel, and was published until December 1925 with an interruption during the First World War. The collection contains 533 stencilled watercolour engravings as well as 290 sketches, 7 unnumbered plates, and numerous coloured wood engravings in the text. The most renowned illustrators contributed to the publication: George Barbier, Raoul Dufy, Pierre Brissaud, Marty, Guy Arnoux, Benito, Robert Bonfils, Brunelleschi, Laboureur, etc. The articles on fashion or various fashionable subjects, are signed by: G. Mourey, E. Henriot, J.-L. Vaudoyer, Fr. de Miomandre, Cl. Roger-Marx, J. Giraudoux, H. de Régnier, P. MacOrlan, G. Baër, etc.
