Introduction

This catalogue presents a history of violent sieges, heroic escapes, brutal murders, but also of piece and joyful celebrations. In the time of the Eighty Years’ War and the periods right before and after, many well-known episodes of Dutch history took place. The brothers De Witt and Johan van Oldenbarnevelt are some of the country’s most famous political figures. The Synod of Dordrecht was a decisive moment in religious history. And then there were the many battles, such as the Siege of Nieuwpoort, which is counted among the bloodiest sieges in world history.

The themes of politics, religion and battles are well represented in the diverse collection of history prints of Antiquariaat Arine van der Steur. The catalogue is therefore ordered according to these three categories.

The prints are mainly grouped by the historical events that they depict. However, the periods in which the prints were produced vary widely. Some were news prints or broadsides of the time, others were created decades or even centuries later. This makes it not only interesting to see what events were chosen to be depicted, but especially how they were presented. How were these important events perceived at the time, how were they remembered, and how did the prints’ makers want them to be remembered?

Each print is presented by its original title. If no title was available, one has been assigned. The prints’ descriptions state both their appearance and content. Texts on the prints have been included in the descriptions as completely as possible. Mentions of the prints in reference works have been noted by referring to the author or series’ title and the print’s number. In most cases, reference is made to Frederik Muller’s De nederlandsche geschiedenis in platen, but also to the Hollstein series and Atlas Van Stolk.

With this catalogue we hope to bring you a spectacular journey back in time through the sixteenth- and seventeenth-century Netherlands. Safe travels, for – as you will discover – many dangers lie ahead!

Fokke, Simon (1712-1784); after Nieulandt, Adriaen van (1586/1587-1658); after Wit, Izaak Jansz. de (1744-1809) 'Jaarlyksche Ommegang der Gildens en Leproozen'; Procession of guild members and lepers in Amsterdam on 'koppermaandag', 1604.

This beautiful view of the Dam square represents the lepers' parade on "Koppersmaandag". This procession took place on the first Monday after Epiphany (January 6). On that day, lepers were allowed to leave their home and they were granted a festive city tour. Because of the great number of people attending, the parade was dismissed in 1604. Thus Nieulandt represented the last procession. It arrives from the Damrak, behind the Waag, onto Dam Square. The residents of the home - a woman, a man and a child - sit in horse-drawn sleighs, and draw attention to themselves by flapping their Lazarus flap. In this way, lepers were announcing their presence so that people in health could avoid getting closer and ultimately not getting sick. In the barrels on the sleighs was collected alms. Title below in Dutch and French: 'Jaarlyksche Ommegang der Gildens en Leproozen, op Koppermaandag te Amsterdam; opgehouden Ao. 1604 / Procession annuelle des Confrairies & des Lépreux d'Amsterdam hors d'usage dés l'Année 1604'. 'De Droeve Ellendigheden van den Oorloogh'; The Miseries and Misfortunes of War.
Copy of the frontispiece to the set of 18 plates by Callot representing the sufferings and the misfortunes caused by war. This impression is a rare find as all the documented Dutch copies bear a different signature at bottom. Lettered with title: 'De Droeve Ellendigheden van den Oorloogh seer aerdigh en konstigh Afgebeeldt door Iaques Callot Loreïns Edelman en jn druck vijtgegeuen door Gerret Lukasz,' ('The sad miserableness of the war', very nice and ingenious depicted by Jacques Callot Gentleman from Lorraine and published by Gerret Lucas). Other states of this same plate report the name of the publisher in full [London, British Museum, no. 1861,0713. 1610] and an even later state feature the name of the engraver: 'Leon Schenk Excutid' and a number [N:2] on the bottom right [Amsterdam, Rijksmuseum, no. RP-P-1911-3661]. Therefore our impression seems to be an early state of the Amsterdam copy by van Schagen.
